Ed Hardy with memento

GLASS SHARD COUGHED UP

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Ed Hardy, veteran Victoria policeman, has literally coughed up a menacing memento of a plane crash almost two years ago.

It's a fragment of plexiglass with razor-sharp edges, apparently from the shattered windscreen of the plane, which was swept into one of Hardy's lungs along with water he swallowed when the plane flipped upside-down into the Courtenay River.

The fragment is triangular, measuring just over an inch long, better than half an inch wide and eighth of an inch thick.

On Nov. 26, 1971, Hardy and three other area policemen were flying to Campbell River on an investigation in a leased Cessna 172 when they were forced by bad weather to attempt a landing at the Courtenay civic airfield.

Battered by strong winds, the plane clipped a tree and flipped into the river. One of the passengers, Victoria RCMP Const. Michael Mason, was killed.

Hardy, in the passenger's seat beside the pilot, remembers only coming to while choking on the water. He suffered cuts around the mouth and to his hands as well as bruises.

It was six months later the fragment first made its presence felt. Hardy was working on a murder investigation when he was overcome by a violent coughing spell, accompanied by some bleeding. Tests followed and it was thought he was suffering from chronic bronchitis. Plexiglass would not show up on X-rays.

Watergate Missing Link?

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Federal investigators suspect the Watergate break-in was ordered because of Republican fears the Democrats possessed highly incriminating evidence against President Nixon, the Post-Dispatch reported today.

The evidence was believed to include information that would link the president to questionable large-scale contributions from billionaire Howard Hughes and to a favorable settlement of federal antitrust action against the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., the newspaper said.

"The investigative theory is highly significant because it would provide for the first time a rational explanation of the bugging and break-in that led to the far-reaching Watergate scandals," said the story, written by Thomas W. Ottenad, a Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

The newspaper said the theory would lend weight "to allegations of high-level involvement in the break-in because Mr. Nixon's effort to halt ITT prosecution and the connection of his intimate friend, Charles G. 'Bebe' Rebozo, with the reclusive Hughes were known only to the president or a few of his top associates."

White House documents obtained by the Post-Dispatch show a determined effort by the administration to link Hughes to the Democrats, the story said.

"Rebozo, who had a short while before received $100,000 from the mysterious billionaire that may have been intended for Mr. Nixon's benefit, played a key, secret part in the effort, the documents indicate," the newspaper said.

The story said Senate Watergate committee investigators are examining actively the theory of the burglars' true motivation.

Nixon Man Took Tapes

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A secret service agent said today that a crucial Watergate tape covering the period of President Nixon's talk with his former counsel John Dean was taken from a safe on July 11 under orders from senior White House officials by presidential aide Stephen Bull.

The agent conceded that his original notes on when tapes were removed and returned did not indicate whether the tapes in question had ever been returned although a log compiled later showed they were brought back the next day.

The White House has said that there is no recording of the April 15 Nixon-Dean talks —considered crucial to Watergate prosecution because Dean said he told the president he was co-operating with authorities—because the taping equipment malfunctioned.

The agent, Raymond Zumwalt said White House aides checked out batches of sensitive recordings on numerous occasions during the time the Watergate scandal was breaking open.

Also today, the White House offered to let Judge John Sirica listen to the April 15 tape so he could hear for himself that it ran out prior to the Dean meeting.

Sirica requested that lawyers for the White House and the Watergate prosecution force give him advice on how to get technical help to determine if White House recordings had been altered.

Zumwalt said that according to his notes Bull checked out 22 tapes, covering a period in late February and March of 1973, on April 25.

That was 10 days after the president learned that Dean had begun offering to give damaging testimony against top administration officials.

Zumwalt said Bull returned the 22 tapes later the same day, checked them out again the following day and returned them May 2.

Another batch of 26 tapes was checked out by Bull June 4, 1973, and returned at some unrecorded date, he said.

On June 25 a secret service official, Lou Sims, checked out a tape that included a telephone conversation between Nixon and Dean in middle of late March and on July 11 Bull checked out a total of six tapes, Zumwalt said, including the controversial April 15 tape.

Prosecutors raised the possibility today that the tapes covering the period of April 11-16 which were removed in July were taken from the White House in July by former presidential adviser H. R. Haldeman, listened to and never returned.

Richard Ben-Veniste, a lawyer for the Watergate special prosecution force, elicited through cross-examination of Zumwalt that the critical tape was removed from a safe on orders of senior White House officials at a time that Haldeman is known to have listened to at least one of Nixon's tape-recorded conversations bearing on Watergate.

Zumwalt conceded that his original raw notes do not indicate that the critical April tape was ever returned although a transcription of those notes made July 18 showed it was.

Haldeman, who quit as White House chief of staff, April 30 in a major post-Watergate shakeup, testified before the senate Watergate

Jaworski Replaces Cox

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Leon Jaworski, 68, former president of the American Bar Association, was appointed today to replace Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

Acting attorney-general Robert Bork, in announcing the appointment, said Jaworski would be unrestricted and independent in his freedom to pursue the Watergate investigation.

Bork also said Nixon will not discharge the special prosecutor, as he did Cox, without first consulting with congressional leaders and obtaining their majority agreement.

When asked if Jaworski would have the authority to initiate legal action against the president to obtain legal documents in his job, Bork said "absolutely."

The announcement was made at the same time that President Nixon nominated Sen. William Saxbe to be the next attorney-general.

Nixon personally went to the White House press centre to announce the Saxbe nomination, while the Ohio Republican stood by his side smiling.

Saxbe "is an individual who wants to take this position to do everything he possibly can to serve the nation as the first lawyer of the nation," the president said.

Gov't Blocks Firm's Sale

The provincial government has blocked the sale of a logging company in the Kootenays to a Japanese-owned firm, Resources Minister Robert Williams said Wednesday.

Williams said there had been an application from Crestbrook Forest Industries, which is more than 50 per cent owned by the Mitsubishi-Honshu Corporation of Japan, to acquire the assets of Kootenay Forest Products Ltd., a major employer in the Nelson area.

The sale was blocked through government refusal to allow the necessary transfer of Crown timber cutting rights in the Kootenay Lake basin. Without cutting rights, acquisition of Kootenay Forest Products is meaningless to Crestbrook.

Williams said there were major considerations in refusing to approve the sale — environmental protection and Canadian ownership.

The minister said a recent government study showed a need for preservation of wildlife values in the Kootenay region and that the allowable cut of timber allocated to industry already exceeds recommended maximums in six of seven cutting areas.

Present logging practices in the area have resulted in the deterioration of the timber resource, he said, and logging in some of the Kootenay areas has threatened the winter food supply of mountain caribou in the region.

As far as Canadian ownership is concerned, Williams said the Mitsubishi-Honshu Corporation already dominates the forest economy of the East Kootenay area. With the acquisition of Kootenay Forest Products, "this would have given them the dominant role over the whole Kootenay Lake basin in the West Kootenays as well," he said.

"The government was of the opinion that so dominant an equity position in an important region of the province should be in Canadian hands," Williams said.

The minister said it is unlikely Kootenay Forest Products will close down as a result of the sale not going through, since the company made profits in its last fiscal year.

The application by Crestbrook to acquire Kootenay Forest Products has been before the government for about six months, he said.

Kootenay Forest has a sawmill and plywood plants at Nelson.

Crestbrook Forest Industries has numerous forestry operations in the Kootenay region, in the area of Kimberley, Creston and Cranbrook.

Energy Message Twice-Delayed

Times News Services

A contentious and wide-ranging policy statement on the Canadian energy situation, including probable hefty increases across the country in the consumer price of gasoline and oil, was twice postponed by federal energy minister Donald Macdonald today.

Originally scheduled for 11 a.m. PST, Macdonald first delayed the statement until 2 p.m. PST and later put it back to 5 p.m. PST.

The announcement of the first delay said the speech was being stalled "to avoid any repercussion on Canadian stock markets," where oil issues posted heavy advances today.

There was no reason given for the second delay.

Earlier, Macdonald had said the statement would take a hard look at the varying price differences of gasoline and heating oil between Eastern Canada which relies on imported supplies and the West which uses domestic crude.

He hinted that these prices might be equalized so as not to pose an unnecessary hardship on eastern Canadians.

Canadian crude oil exports for November, meanwhile, will be fixed at $1,005,280 barrels a day, the lowest level since export controls were imposed by the government.

A National Energy Board spokesman said the figure, down from 1,118,744 barrels a day last month, reflects high domestic demand as winter approaches.

In the U.S. Exxon announced Wednesday it will begin allocating gasoline to all of its service stations east of the Rocky Mountains today because of the shortage of foreign crude oil.

Like most of the other major U.S. oil companies, Exxon had its dealers on allocation during the early summer period of tight gasoline supplies but it suspended the program in July.

HALLOWEEN HIJACKERS TRIED TORCH

NANAIMO (CP) — An 11-year-old boy making his Halloween rounds was waylaid by two older boys who doused his Dracula cape with lighter fluid and tried to ignite it.

Fortunately the match wouldn't light but the two boys, aged about 14, grabbed his candy loot and left.

The child's name is being withheld to prevent further attacks.

Police were investigating the incident today.

BORDER PLAN FIZZLES

BELFAST (UPI) — Members of a paramilitary Protestant organization set up roadblocks at minor frontier crossings today but failed to seal off the border between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic as threatened.

Police said uniformed members of the extremist Ulster Defence Association halted traffic on minor roads, but avoided major intersections linking Ulster and the republic.

UDA leaders had announced plans to seal off the frontier to halt the alleged infiltration of IRA gunmen into the province.

Canada-U.S. Air Talks Snag

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Canada-U.S. air talks have broken off without agreement and an American participant said today they had encountered a "serious impasse."

The Canadian delegation led by external affairs representative Michel Dupuy returned by transport department aircraft to Ottawa during the night after three days of negotiations which lasted from early morning until late in the night.

Michael Styles, head of the state department's aviation negotiation section, said there was no agreement on the question of airline charters between Canada and the United States.

"There is a serious impasse," he said. "It is not clear if it can be resolved."

He added that there are no plans "at this time" for a renewal of the negotiations, which have already dragged on for four years.

After meeting late into the night at the state department, the two sides "felt it was desirable to take another look" at the obstacles that remained, Styles said.

The two countries had initialled an agreement last August which resolved the questions of commercial air routes between Canada and the U.S. and the customs preclearance of passengers destined for each country.

Final approval and signature was postponed until accord could be reached on the $11-million-a-year charter business, but both sides said at the time that they hoped to wind up that section comparatively soon.

Instead, the talks have been prolonged through a series of meetings held alternately here and in Ottawa.

Hush-Hush A-Plant Accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government disclosed today an accident occured Oct. 20 at its Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic facility involving highly secret experimental equipment.

One experimental device was virtually destroyed and some others were damaged, an Atomic Energy Commission spokesman said.

Disclosure of the accident—in which no one was reported hurt and the cause of which is not yet determined—was held up for nine days because the project is "a secret and sensitive one," he said. The project is aimed at developing a new process for producing uranium for weapons and power plants.

The spokesman explained that progress on U.S. experiments with the process—called the "gas centrifuge" — have long been kept secret from any country, including friendly ones, in part because the process if perfected, could be used to produce fissionable uranium for weapons.

Gov't Said Lying On Inflation War

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare Minister Lalonde's statement that "parliament and the government are taking all reasonable steps" to control rising living costs has not been received favorably by Conservative Gerald Baldwin.

The statement, in a circular that accompanied this month's old-age pension cheques, is "a false, fraudulent and lying statement," Baldwin said.

In the Commons, Baldwin asked to be "disassociated from this cruel hoax the government is trying to perpetrate on the people of this country."

The food prices review board spent an estimated $110,000 on its 15-day blitz of supermarkets earlier this fall, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Canadian Truce Team Halted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will go to the United Nations Friday to discuss "problems" about the composition of the peace force and no Canadians will proceed to the Middle East in the meantime, he told the Commons today.

Sharp said he would meet Waldheim in New York because "questions have arisen that can only be settled by discussion with the secretary-general."

He referred to reports that the Soviet Union and Egypt objected to the presence of Canada—a NATO country — if no Warsaw Pact countries were included.

Canada has been asked to provide all logistics backup for the 7,000-man force and this was protested by Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik in private talks with Waldheim Wednesday on the grounds that there had been insufficient Security Council debate on the issue.

One theory is that Malik raised the objection to put pressure on Waldheim and on the Security Council to get Eastern European representation in the Middle East force. The Soviets have been attempting to get a Polish contingent accepted but the suggestion has been firmly rejected by Israel.

Israel took its terms for Middle East peace talks to Washington today, picking up where Egypt left off.

At the truce front, opposing soldiers manned the shaky cease-fire lines within shouting distance of each other.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir was in Washington to seek "answers and clarifications" about U.S. policy in meetings today with President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and was expected to seek U.S. support for a prisoner-of-war exchange before Israeli troops pull back to the lines they held at the Oct. 22 start of the

A beefed-up Human Rights Act — with penalties of up to $5,000 for damages to a person's self respect — was introduced in the legislature Wednesday. For full details see Page 3.

On the same page is a story which claims there is an unusual trading pattern concerning Kaiser Resources and an MLA asked the government if it is purchasing shares in four B.C. companies.

There's good news on Page 11 for widows of government employees and owners of motor homes. Widows who remarry will not have their pensions cut off or reduced. And for motor home owners' licence fees will be reduced, some by as much as 50 per cent.

Also on Page 11 is a story concerning the new Department of Mines and Petroleum Resources Act with the opposition again arguing the act gives the government too much power and is blank cheque legislation.

AN APPLE A DAY . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — The nationality of a diseased apple provoked a question of privilege in the Commons Wednesday as a British Columbia Conservative rose to defend rights of domestic apple growers.

George Whittaker told the Commons that he had spied an apple in a Commons cafeteria with bitter pit — a disease he said made it unfit for human consumption.

Investigating further, he found the apple came from a box from Washington state.

As cries of "shame" rose from opposition benches, Whittaker said that at the height of the season for Canadian apple producers, parliamentary diners should be provided with the home-grown variety.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux replied he had considerable sympathy for the complaint, since the best Canadian variety — the McIntosh — was developed in Dundas County in Ontario . . . which he represents.

Sleep Beats Saving

OTTAWA (UPI) — Keeping the clocks on Daylight Saving time won't help Canadians in the present energy crisis but staying in bed longer in the morning might, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday.

Social Credit MP Eudore Allard urged fellow members to have the government do away with Standard Time so it stayed lighter longer at the end of the day. He was not successful. Macdonald said electricity was not the problem. "The critical problem is home heating oil and that would create a critical demand on that resource," he said.

"The longer you stay in bed the more oil you conserve," he said.

With the clocks on Daylight Saving Time, Canadians would be rising in the morning to dark houses at the coldest time of the day and the first thing they would do is turn up the heat, he said.

Rebel Rockets Hit Disabled War Vets

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Rebels firing rockets and tossing grenades killed six persons and wounded 13 others early today in an attack against a suburban Phnom Penh hamlet housing disabled war veterans.

Residents said the Communist-led Khmer Rouge guerrillas attacked the hamlet of Kambaul, nine miles southwest of Phnom Penh, shortly after midnight, opening fire on sleeping veterans and their families.

They said guerrillas began pulling back when told Kambaul was a hamlet of disabled veterans, indicating the raiders might have hit the wrong target, the hamlet is 500 yards from a national military training centre.

Witnesses said the insurgents killed six persons, including the mother and two sons of Prach Chhuon, a blind folksinger, and the daughter of Pek Kuork, a dwarf clown who had been living at the hamlet while helping entertain troops at nearby bases.

'72 SPOOKS LOCKED UP

KELOWNA (CP) — Four teen-agers who had a wild Halloween a year ago spent a much quieter one this year — in jail.

Sentenced to spend Wednesday night in jail for creating a disturbance last Halloween in nearby Rutland, the four turned up at the police station here promptly at 6 p.m.

Walt Miner, Don Lingor, Alf Evans and Les Krogel, all aged 18 or 19, spent the evening contemplating where last year's Halloween ruckus had landed them.

Rutland, hit often in previous years by marauding bands of older teen-agers, was quiet this Halloween, RCMP reported.

Meir Meets Nixon on-again, off-again ceasefire.

A report from Jerusalem says Mrs. Meir is also proposing a plan for "de-confrontation" along the Suez Canal which was approved by the Israeli cabinet at a special meeting on Tuesday.

It calls for Egyptian and Israeli troops to pull back on either side of the Canal, with United Nations men moving into position between them.

The "de-confrontation" scheme would obviate the controversy over the Oct. 22 ceasefire line and solve the dilemma of Egypt's trapped 3rd army, the source said.

Mrs. Meir told reporters on arrival in Washington there was a "real and basic friendship" between Israel and the United States.

But she said, "naturally, from time to time problems and questions arise, about which we seek answers and clarifications."

Nixon met Wednesday with Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi, who reportedly urged the president to pressure Israel into pulling its forces back to the Oct. 22 lines. Fahmi was still in Washington today.

In Beirut, guerrilla sources, meanwhile reported the main Palestinian organizations on the verge of a major internal split over whether to accept the ceasefire and sit down to eventual peace talks with Israel.

The sources said only one guerrilla group, the left-wing popular democratic front for the liberation of Palestine, has come out so far in favor of a Soviet-Egyptian invitation to sit in on peace talks.

Other Commando groups, notably the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, have refused to discuss a compromise settlement to the conflict.

Another Beirut report says that Syria and Iraq have refused to receive Kissinger during his tour of Arab capitals next week in protest of Washington's "exaggerated military and financial support" of Israel.

committee last summer that he had taken several of the tapes home to review in mid-July. But he said that he listened to only one, dated Sept. 15, 1972.

Zumwalt said he was not told for whom the tapes were destined when he released them from a locked safe July 11.

Key Senate Republicans warned gloomily Wednesday that President Nixon faces a massive hemorrhaging of his support from GOP senators unless he acts immediately to dispel all suspicions of a Watergate coverup.

"He risks the loss of the troops unless there is total disclosure," said one moderate senator after merging from a hush-hush meeting of 11 members of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, called to discuss what can be done to strengthen the president's deteriorating position.

The senators left little doubt that Wednesday's revelation on the disappearance of two of the contested Watergate tapes will further weaken the president.

"I'm shocked, I'm surprised — I thought all the surprises were out of me," said Sen. James Pearson (Rep—Kans.).

"I think it will very much weaken his position — not only with the Senate but with the country," Pearson continued. "We were getting to the point where we desperately needed something to strengthen it."

(Presidential aide Jeb Stuart Magruder urged Nixon to pressure TV and the press. This and other Watergate stories on Page 36.)

At today's session of the Watergate hearings, Clark MacGregor, who directed Nixon's landslide re-election victory, testified today that he was deceived, used and kept ignorant of the Watergate cover-up that was going on around him.

The former Minnesota congressman and White House aide contradicted the testimony of an earlier witness who swore he repeatedly tried to warn MacGregor of high-level involvement in the Watergate affair.

Robert Mardian, a former assistant attorney-general and Nixon re-election committee lawyer, told the committee that he tried several times to tell MacGregor that previous committee denials of official involvement in Watergate were untrue but that MacGregor refused to listen.

MacGregor testified there was only one occasion on which Mardian attempted to warn him, and it caused him to renew his inquiries of other re-election committee officials, "who assured me they were telling the grand jury under oath what they had told me previously" — that they had no involvement in Watergate.

He indicated that those who were using him included John Ehrlichman, Dean, Mitchell, Mardian and re-election committee deputy Jeb Stuart Magruder. But he specifically excluded Nixon from that group.

"I think I ought to make it crystal clear I do not include the president of the United States in the category of people I say used me," MacGregor said.

Gerald Ford told the congressional hearings into his vice-presidential nomination today that he is "not a saint" and that he welcomes the closest scrutiny of his fitness for the job.

Ford, 60, was leadoff witness as the Senate rules committee opened hearings into his nomination to succeed Spiro Agnew.

In November of 1972 Hardy came down with what was thought to be bronchial pneumonia. Again, there was heavy coughing and blood.

In September of this year there was another violent coughing fit and blood and this time he was hospitalized 10 days. On Oct. 5 at Victoria General Hospital doctors removed an inoperative lobe of one lung.

Four days after the operation, while still in hospital, Hardy was overcome by his last coughing spell. He said today he felt something in his windpipe almost choking him, reached into his mouth and lifted out the chunk of plexiglass.

On the mend at home, he said he expects to be back at work next month.

$28,000 CONSULTANT

The provincial government has hired a special consultant for the new department of housing at a salary of $28,000 per year.

Hired to work for Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson is Michael Audain, whose appointment took effect Oct. 19. Nicolson said Audain has experience in housing in Ontario.

A cooling trend will continue throughout B.C. during the next couple of days. It should be particularly evident across the interior due to a weak incursion of Arctic air which will also bring scattered snowflurries. Meantime on the coast the cooler regime will be accompanied by sunnier skies.

250 Hearts Lonely

HARTLEPOOL, England (Reuter) — Two hundred and fifty men, including a 73-year-old widower, have mobbed a lonely hearts club in this northern English town which advertised for "strong and sexy" bridegrooms for 100 Hong Kong girls.

The bulk order for British husbands was placed last week by the Hong Kong girls, who said they were fed up with cold, inscrutable men at home.

The director of the lonely hearts club, Evelyn Harrison, said Wednesday: "When the Chinese girls see the photographs of these men they will be fighting over them."

Included in the stampede were airline crews, policemen, army skydivers and a wounded British soldier in Northern Ireland who offered from his hospital bed "strength and a hairy chest." Even an American tried to barnstorm the offer with a $50,000 dowry.

The oldest was a widower from Coventry, central England, who said: "I must be the outsider, but I am an optimist."

One Briton sent in his name and credentials from an oil exploration hut in the Arab oil state of Qatar.

Mrs. Harrison said all the Hong Kong girls are factory workers aged 17 and 23. The girls' spokeswoman, 18-year-old Anna Ling, wrote to Mrs. Harrison's club saying British men are full of sport and fun.

"We are Chinese girls who are tired of old men. They are not very nice."

Rights Act Revamped To Provide Penalties

A beefed-up new human rights code, specifying penalties of as much as $5,000 for damages to "self-respect" and making the provincial government subject to its provisions, was introduced in the legislature Wednesday.

Labor Minister Bill King brought in a bill which is largely a repetition of former human rights legislation brought in by the Social Credit administration in 1969 but which includes the following new provisions:

— Persons cannot be discriminated against with regard to employment on the basis of having been summarily or criminally convicted, unless the conviction related to the person's occupation;

— There cannot be discrimination in employment on the basis of a person's political beliefs;

— Specific fines of $1,000 for individuals and $5,000 for groups are set out for failure to comply with the legislation. The previous act, repealed by King's bill, did not specify monetary penalties;

— Where it is established that a person discriminated against suffers "aggravated damages in respect to his feelings or self-respect," a guilty person can be ordered to pay a fine of $5,000;

— The provincial government, exempted from the previous human rights legislation, is made subject to the new code and all its provisions.

The new legislation specifies the minister of labor may establish boards of inquiry to look into complaints from individuals who feel they have been discriminated against.

The director of human rights for the province, the position now filled by Kathleen Ruff, is given the responsibility of processing such complaints through hearings of a board of inquiry.

Under the legislation, the boards of inquiry will have the power, maintained from the previous act, to order a person found contravening the act to compensate a person discriminated against with all his back salary as well as restore whatever rights and privileges have been denied.

Ruff said today the legislation takes the whole problem of discrimination "far more seriously" than the previous act did.

Along with stiffened penalties and elimination of exemptions, the new bill allows the Human Rights Commission and director to investigate problems of their own initiative instead of requiring an individual to first lay a complaint.

Coverage of union contracts is an important new step, she said, with its requirement that no union contract impose any form of discrimination against any employee covered by the contract.

Ruff said the legislation is "one of the best acts in Canada" since it contains aspects covered in all other provincial legislation as well as having additional coverage for British Columbians.

Regarding discrimination on the basis of political beliefs, King said "there are legitimate political activities that everybody in the province should be entitled to engage in" without jeopardy of losing their jobs.

Discrimination on the basis of a previous summary or criminal conviction is open to interpretation under the legislation. The act specifies that such convictions shall not be constituted as reasonable cause to deny employment unless the charge relates to the occupation or employment of the person concerned.

An additional protection in the new act prohibits discrimination on the bais of race, religion, color, sex, ancestry, place of origin or marital status against any person who wants to acquire land. This was not spelled out in the former legislation.

SIMILAR WORK

Numerous types of discrimination covered under the new legislation were contained in the previous act, including actions affecting buyers of houses, tenants, wage-earners and women doing similar work to men.

One additional clarification of discrimination between male and female employees is that "the concept of skill, effort and responsibility" shall be used to determine what is equal work.

King said Ruff, in her capacity as human rights director, will be responsible for educational and publicity functions of the human rights legislation.

He said the cabinet will be appointing members of the part-time human rights commission, provided for under the legislation, at some later time.

The commission, of which Ruff is the executive officer, will have largely administrative functions.

Stolen Idol Returns

NEW YORK (AP) — A sacred statue stolen in 1966 from Kom, a kingdom in Cameroon, will be returned to the West African country, the present owner said Tuesday. Aaron Furman, an art dealer who eventually acquired the statue, said he cabled the fon, or king, of Kom and told him arrangements for the return were being made.

'75 Car Buyers Warned Of Travel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans who buy 1975 model cars equipped with catalytic converters may run the risk of damaging the converter if they drive in Canada or Mexico, the American Automobile Association says.

The AAA noted Wednesday that neither country is requiring the converters on its 1975 cars to reduce exhaust emissions, as is the United States.

As a result, the low-lead gasoline needed by converter-equipped cars may not be available on trips to these countries.

All stations in the United States will be required to carry low-lead gasoline.

INDIAN AFFAIRS BUILDS A WALL

OTTAWA (CP) — The next Indian war party that tries to hold a sit-in at the Indian affairs department here will literally have to break through a steel wall first.

Workmen from the public works department started construction of the wall around the entrance of the 15-storey headquarters some time ago but there is no date set yet for its completion.

The building was twice occupied by Indians.

Security guards will be posted outside the wall and the 2,000 employees will have to show identification cards to get in.

Visitors will be denied entrance until a phone call is made to the office they want to visit.

The security measures are the tightest of any of the 30 or more department buildings in Ottawa.

A department spokesman said Wednesday that the sit-ins are not the only reason for the measures. There had been some petty thefts from offices by people who gained access merely by opening glass doors at the entrance.

SHARE SALES PUZZLE MLA

"Unusual activity" in the selling pattern of Kaiser Resources shares on the Toronto Stock Exchange has an MLA wondering if the government is involved.

In the question period in the legislature Wednesday, Newell Morrison (SC-Victoria) asked Premier Barrett whether the government has authorized the purchase of shares in Afton Mines, Westcoast Transmission or Kaiser Resources.

"I don't think so," Barrett said, adding he would take the question as notice and may answer later.

The permier also declined to answer if the government has authorized purchase of 5,000 B.C. Tel shares.

Outside the house, Morrison said he has information from a good source the B.C. government may be buying shares of the companies he named.

— He said there's been unusual activity on the Toronto exchange in shares of Kaiser which mines coal in southeastern B.C. and exports it to Japan.

Last week, 123,000 shares were traded and the price rose 55 cents to $4.25. Some 51,000 shares exchanged hands on Monday and 70,000 were bought and sold Tuesday. On Wednesday, with the price up to $4.75, 31,000 shares were traded. Usual daily trading is two to three thousand, said the MLA.

Morrison said he's tried to find out from brokerage houses and the exchange who's behind the buying but when he asked if the B.C. government was in the picture, he was told he should ask Barrett.

A spokesman for Kaiser said the company is just as puzzled by the strong activity on the stock exchange, but suggested one possible reason may be the present oil shortage and the better prospects for coal.

The B.C. Development Corporation will be open for business soon, said Trade and Commerce Minister Gary Lauk.

He said no loans have been made by the corporation and no action has been taken to buy shares or take equity positions in any B.C. industry.

He said, however, that applications to the corporation are being reviewed by government and outside consultants.

The corporation was established through legislation passed in the spring session of the house. It is intended to provide low-interest loans to B.C. businessmen to encourage secondary industry in the province.

Views at Home and Abroad

A novel embodying all the material which has kept the United States and its friends agog ever since the Watergate disclosure would be derided as over-imaginative and ridiculously overloaded. But each week seems to bring out some further facet of the case or the Washington figures entangled in it, and the latest—the disclosure that two of the tapes of President Nixon's conversations with Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Dean do not exist, raises questions that are no less spectacular than what has gone before.

When the situation had reached a point where the president was even accused in some quarters of risking a nuclear confrontation with Russia merely to divert attention from his predicament for a few days, it is not hard to believe that the latest claim will be received with wide disbelief, not to say indignation.

If tapes of these two conversations had been made, they might have cleared the president of charges that he knew at an early date of the Watergate incident. Mr. Dean's testimony before the Watergate commission suggested that Mr. Nixon had obviously been speaking for the taped record at various points in their conversation. Mr. Mitchell's version of his telephone talk with the president would have greatly cleared the air if there were tapes to prove it. If records of these two crucial exchanges are now non-existent—although many other tapes are in storage—the president, as one senator observes, should now publicly produce all other evidence that may exonerate him.

It is interesting that throughout the disturbing developments of the case the Democrats have been very restrained in their allegations and criticisms. The import of the situation has been too serious to permit mere party politics to play a leading part. Yet the president's badly eroded position today shows the danger of resorting to silence and presidential privilege as a defence.

Mr. Nixon has had the good fortune to be involved in essential international dealings at a time when his domestic political structure has fallen in wreckage. Regardless of his personal problems, the leader of a great power such as the United States cannot safely be removed when the vital matters of Soviet relations, Chinese relations, disarmament negotiations, and the Middle East bombshell, are demanding the attention of his country and of the world. Just as a threatened war abroad could have made the president's continued presence necessary, so the impending opportunities for peace with the two great communist nations have had a similar effect.

Oddly enough, some of the most virulent comments on President Nixon have come from publications in Britain. That country, still maintaining close ties across the Atlantic despite its Common market affiliation, has been more distressed than most overseas lands by the doings in Washington. Some of the criticism is therefore heated.

The Spectator suggests that if Mr. Nixon "refuses to go then he must be pushed," and refers to his remaining as "a characteristic of a madman." The Sunday Times says "the crisis of the presidency is a crisis for the world," and adds that to a large extent "the moral authority of Mr. Nixon is irrecoverable." The New Statesman sees Mr. Nixon as a "terrified politician seeking to save his own skin," and criticizes his "barefaced deceit of Congress."

But many of the British journals perceive that the office is greater than the man, and the nation is greater than the office, and hope that all three can be sustained to carry out a misson in international affairs that is of vital importance to the free world.

". . . they should separate, they should stay together, they should separate, they should stay together, they should . . ."

Stress in the Old Friendship

It usually takes a crisis to find out how loyal ones friends really are. And it is the same with nations as individuals — a fact that was brought home to the United States last week during the Middle East crisis. Many European nations, including North Atlantic Treaty Allies such as West Germany, refused Americans the use of their ports or airspace in shipping arms to Israel.

Washington was sharply critical of its NATO allies' reluctance, and at the same time the Europeans were miffed that the U.S. had not consulted them about its Mideast policies.

While the U.S. has never been noted for consulting its allies when it felt a quick, decisive action was needed, the Europeans had different motives in refusing the U.S. airspace and ports. Europe is almost wholly dependent on Arab oil. If the Arab states decided to cut off oil supplies to the continent, some economies could be in serious trouble in a matter of weeks. Few European politicians would be willing to risk a fuel drought by allowing some jet fighters to overfly their territory. It is probably also true that Europe's NATO countries, with the Common Market in the background and the Russian bear looking eastward to China, are less inclined to follow the American initiative.

But the European attitude may renew American congressional calls for a reduction, if not phasing out, of American troops in Europe. At present, delicate negotiations on mutual reductions are just beginning with the Warsaw pact nations. A president who is beleagured at home, however, may be forced to give in to an increasingly militant Congress before any disarmament agreement becomes reality. With two Germanys now an accepted reality and relative quiet in the communist East European sphere, a U.S. troop pullout might not affect the continent's status quo as much as it would have a few years ago. But it is interesting to watch how an old alliance delicately balances a new detente.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Inflation

It is claimed that everybody talks about the weather but no one does anything about it. In Canada the same is true about inflation, which is everybody's worry and nobody's business. Our governments shrug their collective shoulders and seem to believe that inflation is a natural phenomenon such as sun spots, earthquakes, tornadoes and the like. Not so long ago the House of Commons sat until 5:31 a.m. debating this subject, with absolutely no results.

That would not be so bad if the effect of inflation were felt by all alike but, unfortunately, that is not so. Our legislators set their own indemnities, professionals raise their own fees, businessmen up prices and organized labor can strike for higher wages. This leaves unorganized labor, whose wages always lag behind, and those on fixed income, whose intake never moves at all, to carry the burden.

Fortunately for our future, inflation is an effect for which there must be a cause. To arrive at that cause it may be necessary to throw aside some deeply entrenched ideas as to the sanctity of the present economic order but this has to come if any real progress is to be made. —F. L. P. Anderson, 217—2900 Mayfair Drive.

In the Cold

In Alexander Solzhenitsyn's novel One Day In The Life Of Ivan Denisovich there is the line: "When you're cold, don't expect sympathy from someone who's warm." And we are the cosy ones, we Canadians, and are a living example of the sad human trait embodied in the author's line.

Solzhenitsyn, and Russian writers in general, are freezing, possibly to death, in the frigid climate of Soviet censorship and we offer them no appreciable warmth. We should be screaming with indignation, we who enjoy a precious form of government which guarantees our personal freedom — but no — instead our political leaders keep quiet because of diplomatic niceties, our religious leaders stay mute because they are philosophically impotent, and the general population remains silent because of an indifference bred by a fat, warm, comfortable society.

We should hang our heads in shame, for if you are aware of an injustice and say nothing, you help perpetrate that injustice by your silence.

Solzhenitsyn has asked that pressure, by way of world opinion, be brought to bear on Soviet authorities to stop their censorship of Russian writers. For those who question the effectiveness of such pressure he states that the powers that be in this country are susceptible to outside criticism. And he, if anyone, is in a position to judge.

He is the reigning genius in contemporary Russian literature. In 1970 he was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature which Soviet authorities refused to allow him to officially accept. Through the years his work has been confiscated by state security people and either smothered or grotesquely misused. The man has also been forced to spend eight years in labor camps and three years in exile for simply making derogatory comments about Stalin in a letter to a friend.

What other forms of harassment lie in store for Solzhenitsyn no one can say. But perhaps they can be minimized if enough of us speak out in defence of this beleaguered man, and, in general, for the abolishment of censorship in the Soviet Union.

If you have never before stood up and been counted, I would implore you to take this opportunity. You might find yourself walking just a bit taller in a world you are helping to make just a bit more sane.

The most immediate person to write might be the Soviet ambassador to Canada:

His Excellency: Boris P. Miroshnichenko
Embassy of U.S.S.R.
285 Charlotte Street
Ottawa, Ontario
K1N 8L5

Ten minutes of your time and an eight cent stamp. Or a telegram. Tell the man you protest. Tell your friends to tell the man they protest. Deluge him with letters and telegrams.

If you are so apathetic to injustice that you are not moved to act, well, then sleep snug in your warm, democratic bed tonight. What does it matter if out there a brilliant human being is freezing to death — if a few moments of bravery on your part might possibly, collectively, make all the difference in the world? — Barry Peterson, R. R. No. 1, Nelson, B.C.

Failure

If Prime Minister Trudeau was quoted correctly in "Time", October 22, in the statement at a banquet given to Chou-En-Lai / that "The social experiment which you are conducting in this country has already demonstrated its success. Its interest to Canadians is found in the fact that it emphasizes in many respect — though by no means all — goals identical to those held by us," then he was speaking for himself and not for me as a Canadian.

While admitting Communism may have improved the lot of the Chinese, where the average man had nothing to start with, and admitting also that Chinese Communism in an agrarian society may bring improvements in basic food and housing standards, I by no means believe that our goals are identical in any way with the goals of Communist China.

Our private enterprise system has far outstripped even the best efforts of any Communist country and without the complete loss of freedom or choice invariably connected to all Communist countries.

If Mr. Trudeau finds frequent visits to Communist countries very interesting and attractive, he is speaking for himself — not for me. I don't believe in Communism. I think Socialism is and always has been a dismal failure.—M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra St.

MAURICE WESTERN

Picking Up the Tory Pieces

OTTAWA — Robert Bourassa's rushing victory in the Quebec elections has important implications for federal politics.

The immediate, and obvious, beneficiary is the minority Trudeau Government. After this massive demonstration of Quebec Liberal power, many Conservatives are bound to have second thoughts about the wisdom of pressing for an early dissolution.

There are other important advantages; the removal of an important cause of business uncertainty and the fact that the Prime Minister can now make a more convincing case for the success of his federalist policies.

It was of interest, however, that Mr. Trudeau, although elated with the results, refrained carefully from any claim of final victory over separatism. For the other side of the Quebec election coin is the fact that the PQ is now the official Opposition in the province, having attracted 30 per cent of the vote and a much larger percentage of the French-speaking electorate. There is point to the warnings against complacency for it is clear that separatism has become a respectable option in the eyes of a great many Quebecers.

Weak Point

The weakness of federalism in Quebec is that it has become overwhelmingly identified with a single, credible political party. But in democracies popularity is fleeting and, as numerous examples show, not guaranteed by top-heavy majorities which may, indeed, make ministries more vulnerable. What Quebec, alone of the provinces, conspicuously lacks is a viable federalist alternative capable of attracting the discontented vote which otherwise represents a potential power for separatism.

One of the more interesting election-night observations was, for this very reason, the assertion by Howard Grafftey, the Conservative member for Brome-Missisquoi, that the Conservatives must now field their own candidates in Quebec province. Both from the provincial and from the national standpoints, this would be a welcome development. But such assertions have been heard before and nothing of consequence has come of them. Mr. Grafftey, as a federal politician, is well enough aware of one of the difficulties, that in matters provincial, Quebec does not take kindly to instruction from national parties.

The Conservative default, of long standing, cannot be attributed solely to lethargy. For some 37 years the position that a provincial Conservative party might have filled has been pre-empted by the Union Nationale and to some extent, in the recent period, by the Creditistes. Maurice Deuplessis, originally a Conservative leader, took the party with him into a nationalist coalition which he dominated and made his personal instrument.

HEWARD GRAFFTEY
. . . field their own

In this situation the federal Conservatives, having no proper Quebec base of their own, sought a substitute in alliances of convenience. There had been a partial precedent in the arrangement of 1911 with Quebec nationalists. But the circumstances differed in this respect that Duplessis was no mere out-of-office politician but a powerful ruler in a position to make his own terms, if and when he chose.

The results were deplorable. For the Conservatives, in courting Duplessis and his nationalist successors, risked their credit elsewhere in the country. Moreover, even apparent success, such as the Diefenbaker breakthrough in 1958, was of transient value. Of the Conservatives then elected in Quebec, many were in effect Duplessis delegates, as they showed by abstentions when policies at issue were unpleasing to the UN commander who claimed their first allegiance.

Although much in the situation changed with the passing of Duplessis, the temptation to trim Conservative policies for the sake of nationalist support did not disappear since the UN continued to be a force in Quebec politics.

Although it certainly does not offer the prospect of quick dividends, there is much to be said for Mr. Grafftey's idea. What the election has created is an opportunity to implement it, for the Union Nationale went down to utter defeat at the polls on Monday.

It may be only a passing opportunity, however, for nationalism, in the more or less traditional UN form, has deep roots in Quebec. Mr. Trudeau concluded, probably correctly, that many UN supporters had voted Liberal out of fear of the Parti Quebecois. Such conversions are likely to be temporary, especially if it is true as reported that the UN war chest has survived the UN debacle.

Discredited

After all, the Union Nationale was not only defeated but, as it seemed at the time, hopelessly discredited at the time of the Quiet Revolution. Its incredible recovery under Daniel Johnson is an indication of how rapidly changes can occur in the politics of Quebec. In other words the Conservatives must move now or the chance may be gone.

The reaction of some New Democratic observers in Ottawa is quite different, although highly interesting. For some time the NDP has watched the Parti Quebecois with fascinated attention. This has persisted despite the showdown with the now-departed Waffle, whose leaders actively pursued an alliance with the Quebec group. It may perhaps be said that the NDP is interested not in the PQ as it is but in the PQ as some speculate that it may become.

For tactical reasons Rene Levesque somewhat muted the separatist appeal in the recent campaign while placing strong emphasis on a program of social reform. The NDP is therefore tempted to look on the PQ as a party in transition.

Mincome Is Not Kingdom Come

Mr. Scott's article dealing with Mincome expresses surprise that the elderly people in B.C. are not visiting the Belmont Building in droves. Apparently our Premier, Mr. D. Barrett, is similarly amazed.

Personally, I can see no cause for amazement. Mincome in the first instance was designed to assist pensioners whose income from all sources did not exceed a specified amount. In the first instance the amount was $200 and this has since been increased to $209.02 for a single person and $418.44 for a couple. In effect the B.C. government added a maximum payment of $29.86 to the federal Old Age Security and federal guaranteed income supplement to create a total income of $200 and $400 per month. If the person or couple had income in addition to the old age pension but still not above the $200 or $400 mark the amount paid by B.C. was reduced accordingly.

All of the old-age pensioners whose income was less than $200 per month would obviously gain by making application for Mincome. To this extent, the program is good. Unlike Mr. Scott's previous critic, I have no objection to a person making application for anything the law says he has a right to receive.

Effective as at October 1, 1973, Mincome was made available to persons in the 60-64 age group. In order to qualify, this group also had to satisfy Mincome as to the amount of their income. Again if it was less than $209 per month they were entitled to the difference between their actual income and $209. In this case the full amount was paid from the B.C. Treasury and would be subject to Income Tax. Who in this group could benefit from Mincome? I suggest very few.

A person 60-64, unemployed and not likely to find employment because of his age, with little or no income, could qualify. But, and it's a big "but" — he's probably on welfare and receiving as much if not more than he could get via Mincome. In addition the cost of welfare is shared by the federal and provincial governments as well as local municipalities. On this basis it could cost the province considerably less to keep the person on welfare than it would to pay Mincome.

To suggest, as Mr. Scott does and Mr. Barrett seems to hope, that a person should leave even a mediocre job and apply for Mincome is sheer nonsense. An example should clarify this. A steady job at the low wage of $2.50 per hour, on the basis of an 8 hour day, will produce a gross income of $5,200 per year. With all the deductions for income tax, unemployment insurance, pension, etc., the take-home pay is still more than double the Mincome payment. As the wage per hour increases the reasons for hanging on to the job until age 65 also increase. At $3.50 per hour (a low wage today) the maximum earnings would be $7,280. Who would willingly swap this for $2,508 which is also subject to income tax?

This brings us to the conclusion that the only persons in the 60-64 group presently employed who are likely to be interested in Mincome are those who are faced with losing their jobs for reasons beyond their control.

I suspect that many elderly people having read Mr. Scott's article would approach the Belmont Building with their heads in the clouds. Many would leave the building with their hopes dashed. For this reason I suggest that the author of a fairly widely read column should be more careful with advice which although well meant could create frustration and confusion.—C. McCreath, 6925 Central Saanich Rd.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 1, 1913

A dozen fashionably dressed women from Victoria reached Seattle last night aboard the Princess Charlotte steamer, and were relieved of expensive aigrettes and birds of paradise by Uncle Sam's customs officers soon after they had reached the baggage inspection room at Pier 1. All submitted without protest to the loss of the pretty millinery plumes. No reason was given by Uncle Sam's men, but it is known the seizures began last Friday and have something to do with a great U.S. fear that such plumes might be carrying the dreaded parrot fever.

Sex in prime time

Television Woos The 'Young Adult'

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

In any discussion of "permissiveness" on television, the favorite catchword of defenders is "contemporary." Second in popularity is "mature." Both words carry legitimate weight, but neither can obscure the fact that TV, as the most massive of mass mediums, is confronted with some very serious problems.

Permissiveness refers, of course, primarily to matters sexual. The public, ironically, is likely to be less concerned about such TV matters as violence or constant huckersterism. By now, those commodities are familiar on the small screen. The prime-time sex explosion is relatively recent.

Smarmy Talk Show

Implied sex has long been a staple of cutely smarmy conversations on the late-night talk shows. More direct, but hardly explicit, treatment were incorporated into, of all places, some of the afternoon soap operas. In prime time, however, standard procedures had seemed curiously bound to the old movie code: A couple might be put in bed together, but at least one of the man's feet had to remain on the floor.

Now all has changed, and on all levels of TV programming. On "Gunsmoke," James Arness gets to indulge, quite tastefully, in an occasional but unmistakable dalliance. On "The Girl With Something Extra" and "Adam's Rib," the most prominent prop is a double bed on which the married couples cavort ingeniously.

Those are the basic, pervasive themes. Then there are the variations. On "Hawkins," James Stewart unblinkingly takes a tour through a Hollywood society of male homosexuals. On "Medical Centre," Chad Everett discovers that the nurse he has been courting is a lesbian.

It's a long way from "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis." And it leaves TV confronting those problems. One was pinpointed in a recent speech by Herbert S. Schlosser, president of the NBC Television Network:

"This issue, in its basic terms, is how to balance a respect for creative freedom with an equal respect for television as a home medium, a medium that serves so wide a diversity of tastes and interests that it must observe certain limitations."

He added: "As a mass medium for home viewers, television will never lead any parade of permissiveness. But it should not lag so far behind the march of an audience of millions that it can be chained to the past by a few hundred letters of complaint."

That is the more noble and commendable aspect of the problems. Other aspects tend to be considerably more practical and perhaps more pressing. The pressures are coming from two directions.

One, very much in the present, involves advertisers who are assiduously courting urban "young adult" audiences, the more conspicuous of today's consumers. The other, still in the future, is the possibility of competition from pay-TV and video cassettes, both of which promise users more "mature" material than TV is currently able to provide.

Those young-adult audiences include a significant section of the population that has been entertainment-weaned on R-rated or X-rated movies. They are partial to "contemporary" themes. They are unlikely to be turned on by the trials and tribulations of "The Brady Bunch."

Dubious Theory

The theory of community standards is dubious to begin with, but in TV it is impossible. The community is too vast, covering too many different standards. But for the moment, the urban, young adults are the TV-and-advertiser target. Some programs ("Hee-Haw" or "The Lawrence Welk Show") have been demonstrably popular but were dropped from network schedules because they appealed primarily to elderly or rural audiences.

The result is that the "certain limitations" on TV are being broadened. Another result is that, despite the injection of "contemporary" and "mature" situations, the mix of regular prime-time TV is no less banal or blatantly manipulative than it ever was.

Up to the Brink ...With a Yawn

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

Last week, when Richard Nixon flapped his gigantic wings, you could hear the missiles, humming in their silos.

A world-wide alert of the U.S. armed forces. The biggest military awakening since the Cuban Missile Crisis.

Across the tundra to the north, it was easy to picture Soviet technicians oiling the joints of 10,000 ICBMs, seeds of nuclear dragons slumbering in their steel bellies.

It had begun along a narrow trench of water between the territories of two ancient tribes, the Egyptians and the Jews. It was like a ghost from the far distant past emerging from the history books to haunt us.

From the point of view of the monitoring satellites—both Russian and American—sweeping in orbits high over the Sinai, the Suez Canal is hardly anything more than a vein on the vast surface of the planet.

Yet, within weeks, the infection had poisoned our whole planetary society. Cowboys and Cossacks were fingering their fail-safe buttons. As swiftly as that, the hatch had been lifted on the door leading into the land of nuclear holocaust.

There were genuine fears that a nerve-shattered and emotionally-frazzled president might be playing berserk melodies on the Doomsday Machine.

And it was not just that the world had once again lurched to the edge of Armageddon. In the wake of Chile, there loomed the spectre of a coup d'etat.

★ ★ ★

Even if only through rotten luck, Richard Nixon had flapped the wings of his tens of thousands of bombers and bombs and missiles and tanks and ships and soldiers at precisely the moment in American history when the ultimate rule of law had been all but crushed in the rubble of Watergate and Agnew.

America was close last week—closer than she had ever been—to being truly headless.

No science-fiction writer had yet cooked up a plot quite so horrifying in its instability.

A crippled and corrupt American president barely clinging to power by his fingernails. Congress mobilizing to seek his impeachment. The man who, by rights, should be standing in the wings waiting to take command, already deposed from office and his successor's appointment still in doubt.

The Egyptian Army rapidly crumbling. Russia suddenly ready to come to the rescue. Ships and planes of the two superpowers already moving into confrontation positions with one another. . . .

Quite a week to live through.

Yet, Friday afternoon, I found myself going for a ride on my bicycle to admire the autumn leaves.

The world had come to the edge of the Third World War, and it had not even crossed my mind to grab my wife and kids and head for the hills. It had not even occurred to me to at least take the kids out of school. There was no sense of panic in the air.

And that was the most bizarre part. No one seemed worried. It was as if the great teetering global society did not really exist, as if we were not really a part of it, as if, somehow, the whole mega-drama was just another bad movie—one we have seen so often that it is impossible any longer to properly react to.

Doom loomed again last week.

Ho, hum.

Whither Aye-Aye?

By MICHAEL FRENCHMAN

The aye-aye looks like one of nature's mistakes. It is a collection of animal and bird spare parts thrown together on a dark night by a sorcerer's apprentice. It is also one of the rarest animals in the world—related to man—and found only in Madagascar.

After 1935 it was thought to have become extinct but it reappeared in the late fifties and strenuous efforts are being made to conserve this peculiar type of lemur.

The International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources claims in its latest Red Date Book list of threatened mammals issued recently that it is "severely depleted, scattered and threatened with extinction." Only some 50 are now thought to exist.

The aye-aye is about the size of a cocker spaniel with strange, round, mechanical-looking eyes and a pair of clawed hands each of which has devilish extended thin finger, out of all proportion in size to the other four claws. It is thin and capable of being extended to a great length. It uses its incisor teeth to lever up the bark of a tree and inserts the single long claw to pulp larvae and grubs.

Altogether it is an ugly creature with rather unattractive habits, and yet it is strangely appealing and intriguing. It is a nocturnal being and lurks in the forest branches making only a high pitched squeaking noise as if in fear. The Malagasies are nervous of this eerie animal and its reputation for spreading evil; it is therefore killed frequently.

Like many other species on the island the aye-aye is unique. But all are battling for survival as the island's growing human population becomes more vigorous in its efforts to reclaim arable land from the forest areas.

The destruction is particularly bad on the east coast where the original forest has almost completely disappeared. The position is now so serious that indigenous vegetation has been destroyed on nine-tenths of the island. As a result of this and because of the incalculable scientific value of the island the IUCN's Survival Service Commission declared it an "emergency area" in the late 1960s.

But unless the pressure to protect much of the forests can outweigh the economic demands of lumbering and agriculture, what has been described as the most interesting collection of animals anywhere in the world will be lost for ever in the greatest zoological catastrophe of the decade.

Where Are We Going In Such a Hurry?

By WILFRED OWEN

'An invention of the devil'

Last month the editors of Japan's foremost newspaper, the Asahi Shimbun, concerned with traffic and pollution in Tokyo, sponsored an international symposium on Man and Transport.

In conformity with the symposium title, the emphasis was on man with the critics taking transport apart, accusing the automobile of original sin and naming it public enemy number one in the land of the rising smog.

The cast of what turned out to be an extraordinary production included urban specialists from a dozen countries, assorted professors, a Buddhist monk, a science fiction writer, a Japanese artist, Buckminister Fuller, a housewife, a bicycle designer, the head of the Japan Let's Go Slow Movement and the director of the Association of Scholarships for Posthumous Children of Traffic Accidents.

The symposium opened with organ music, audio-visual messages from historian Arnold Toynbee and city planner Constantinos Doxiadis, and a memorial address by artist Tara Okamoto, painter of murals for the Tokyo metropolitan government.

Okamoto lamented the homogenized environment that transportation is creating around the world (even New York and Tokyo are looking alike these days) and placed part of the blame on measures being taken to improve transportation. These measures, which aim to rid the city of chaos, to straighten the streets, to smooth everything out and to divide the human arena into work-places and living-places, make successful cities impossible. A city, he said, needs to be a labyrinth, a hodge-podge, twisted and chaotic, to create the confusion that leads to vitality.

City Vitality Sapped

But vitality was at a low ebb in the city, according to author Jean-Francois Ravel (Neither Marx Nor Jesus), who is now engaged in a study of the relation of transport to culture. The function of the city was to suppress the need for transport, but in the sprawling metropois the need for transport becomes so great that it kills communications and displaces culture.

"All our imagination and money must aim at quicker and better public transportation," since we are going to have to live much of our lives riding subways and rapid transit; and the time thus spent must not be lost to culture, rest and enjoyment, he said. Public transport must be given the same care we give to public buildings and our own houses.

This word from Paris was heartening to the Japanese audience, most of whom had left home at least three hours before to catapult themselves onto trains and rapid transit lines which were described by several speakers as the only mass transport in the world without enough room to open a newspaper. It was becoming clearer why the search for remedies was being sponsored by the press.

The symposium left no doubts about its sentiments toward the automobile, to which people were turning to avoid the trains. The car was an invention of the devil, intimidating, exasperating and asphyxiating. Banning cars from the centre of the city, charging the motorist his full social costs, banning downtown parking and providing pedestrian walkways were among the experiments from Europe that appealed.

Longing to Walk

One speaker illustrated the basic human longing to walk in the outdoors with slides of pedestrians. Bicycle designer Hiroshi Manabe, with good humor and excellent sketches, defended the right of young and old to pedal safely in the city streets, asking the motorist "Where are you going in such a hurry in so small Japan?"

But those in favor of hurrying were also represented, including American, French and Japanese developers of high-speed ground transport and builders of the Japan National Railways magnetic levitation (MAGLEV) train, a quiet wheelless air-cushion vehicle which foreign participants bused out to see at the JNR testing grounds.

The MAGLEV train, which is expected to travel 300 miles per hour, is one of Japan's answers to urban congestion, since satellite cities 100 miles away from Tokyo would be accessible via MAGLEV in less than half an hour. It is to be hoped that there would be an effort to provide jobs as well as housing in the satellites to reduce the volume of commuting and leave enough room on the trains to open the paper.

Most of the technical discussion, however, concerned the effort to find a substitute for the automobile. A Japanese answer is the CVS, or Computerized Vehicle System, consisting of four-passenger rubber-wheeled cars on an elevated guideway, a kind of horizontal elevator that responds to push-button commands and goes directly to the desired destination. The Tokyo meeting heard of similar test vehicles in other countries, including the personal rapid transit system now being tested on the campus of the University of West Virginia.

But for all the new technology, the point could not be missed that in every big city of the world man is having troubles with transport, whether the city is Washington with its cars and buses or Kanpur, India, with its bullocks, bicycles and pushcarts. Since everybody seems to be winding up in the same mess regardless of the transport technology in use, the answer to congestion might not lie in transport at all, but in the disorder of cities built without plan or purpose.

It was a touchy point to make in Tokyo that transportation problems were not likely to be solved simply by providing more transportation. Tokyo has built the world's greatest system of public transit, with subways, buses, high-speed trains and a monorail. Together they carry a total of 21 million passengers daily, more than any other city.

But by concentrating on moving, the Japanese now confronts a crisis in living. Despite the world's highest sustained economic growth rate, the Japanese lack housing, sanitation, trees, fresh air, play space and elbow room.

Play in Waterfall

When a Japanese housewife asked why America is building a tracked air-cushion train, the answer was not self-evident, but when Laurence Halprin showed slides of how people were flocking to the pedestrian mall in Portland, and playing in the waterfall, no one had to ask why. Freedom for urban man is an idea whose time has come, even as far north as Ashikawa in Hokkaido, where the busiest street in town had been converted to a shopping mall called People's Park, which even the merchants are feeling happy about. "It is time," said Mayor Kozo Igarashi, "to reconsider the problems of human beings—of returning to the very heart of the matter."

In Tokyo, the heart of the matter is that the cities have more public enemies than the automobile, among them being the failure to visualize the kinds of communities that people want and the absence of a commitment to dedicate the necessary brainpower and energy to get them built. But 700 people had been sufficiently intent on making urban life more tolerable to sit for five days listening to 50 different analyses of what might be done to reverse the current trends.

Before returning to face up to their own problems, foreign participants flew to Hiroshima, the home Toyo Kogyo, makers of the rotary-engine Mazda. There, on the shores of the Japan Sea, 36,000 workers were operating around the clock to keep up with the demand for cars.

Only the shell of one building left standing after the A-bomb remains to commemorate the disaster. Otherwise there are no visible reminders, except perhaps the newness of the trees. There are 750,000 people in the city today, nearly twice as many as before, and they go about their business on modern 8-lane boulevards that already seem hard-pressed to handle the traffic.

But who could say, after seeing the new Hiroshima, that Man would be incapable of finding a solution to Transport?

The Sensuous Physician

By GARY LAUTENS

A disturbing report from California indicates 5 per cent of doctors take sexual advantage of female patients.

That's the result of a study made in Los Angeles and published in the American Journal of Psychiatry.

Fortunately, the vast majority of our medical men are dedicated creatures, pure in thought and deed.

But how can a woman be sure?

Here are a few handy tips.

Your doctor is practising more than medicine if he asks you to sit on his lap while reading the eye chart.

If he asks the nurse to leave while he takes down your particulars.

If his smock is fastened with a zipper instead of buttons.

If he writes your prescription on scented paper.

If the table in his examination room is a double and has a flowered sheet.

If, while going over your x-rays, he suggests sending out for beer and a pizza.

If he keeps his thermometer in a disinfectant made up of five parts alcohol and one part vermouth, with just a twist of lemon.

If, when he places the stethoscope on your chest, he says, "Kitchy-kitchy-koo!"

If he suggests giving you a vaccination some place where it won't show, like his apartment.

If he wants to drop over to your place to see your itchings.

If he wishpers sweet symptoms in your ear.

If he taps you on the knee for more than 45 minutes during a reflex test.

If he says he has bad news and then announces your husband is going to live.

If, when you take off your clothing, he's the one who says, "Ahhh."

If he only uses candlelight in his examination room.

If your temperature is 103 and he wants to mull wine.

If he orders you to go straight to bed, and then home. . . .

You've got Dr. Marcus Lothario.

Tanker Story 'Blown Up'

By AL FORREST
Business Editor

The great oil tanker scare has been blown out of proportion, says E. C. Hurd, president of Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd., the company that has most to lose when Alaska oil becomes available.

Hurd said only a small number of tankers will come through the Strait of Juan de Fuca carrying oil to Cherry Point.

"Most of the oil will go further south to California. There is even talk of exporting Alaska oil to Japan."

He was commenting on the company's results for the first nine months showing a net profit of $11.8 million (1.57 a share) down from $13 million ($1.72) in the corresponding 1972 period.

His report showed 70.2 per cent of sales in 1973 were to Washington State customers. Technically they were supplies, not sales, because the company is a carrier, not a merchant.

What was the company's reaction to the possibility of losing 70 per cent of its volume when the Alaska pipeline is completed?

"It is not certain we will lose all our Washington State customers," he said.

"We know ARCO plans to switch to tankers but there are three other refineries we could continue to supply."

Trans Mountain transports about 400,000 barrels of crude Alberta oil each day to Vancouver. About 120,000 is sold to B.C. refineries and the remaining 280,000 is exported to Washington through an extension of the Trans Mountain Pipeline.

Of this total, 50,000 goes to Cherry Point and 230,000 goes to the other three refineries, Shell and Texaco at Anacortes, and Mobil Oil at Ferndale.

The three are designed to handle Alberta crude while ARCO is set up to process Alaska and foreign crude. With modifications, a refinery can handle either type.

Because of its heavy reliance upon the U.S. market, Trans Mountain has a bigger stake than any other company in the tanker issue.

"We are deeply concerned about the uncertainties facing our company but we are not in a panic," he said.

"We have faced uncertainties before in the past 20 years and we will again."

He said it would be strange if the U.S. turned off the pipeline while parts of that nation were running short of oil. He was confident Alberta crude would continue to supplement Washington State's supply for many years.

In the short term, the attitude of the Canadian government to oil exports was the major problem facing the company. An additional 50,000 barrels of oil per day could be sold to ARCO if the Canadian government would agree to release that amount.

Ottawa has ordered a slight reduction on oil exports while studying how to supply Canadian oil to Quebec and the Maritimes. At present eastern Canada is supplied by foreign oil imported by tanker, mainly from Venezuela.

"There will be considerable uncertainty until the (Canadian) National Energy Board holds its hearings and makes a decision."

He said he expected it would be February before the hearings would be held.

Hurd said he was hopeful the board would decide Trans Mountain could sell as much crude as possible in Washington while the demand was strong and before the tankers cut into the market.

Canpotex

A record $8 million sale of Saskatchewan potash to China has been announced by Canpotex Ltd., overseas marketer for all Saskatchewan potash.

President Roger Hatch said 150,000 metric tons of potash will be delivered to China between January and June, 1974. The total is more than double the 65,000 tons sold to China in the fertilizer year ended last June.

Hatch will lead a special mission to Peking later this year to discuss a possible long-term agreement on potash.

Crestbrook Ind.

Crestbrook Forest Industries Ltd. reports a net profit of $3.4 million or $1.78 a share for the first nine months of 1973 compared with a net loss of $1.8 million or $1.81 a share for the same period of 1972.

President V. C. Brown told shareholders that sales for the nine-month period were $21.5 million in 1973 compared with $16.9 million in the same period of 1972.

G-W Life

Great-West Life Assurance Co. of Winnipeg Wednesday opened its U.S. marketing headquarters in Denver, Colo.

President James W. Burns said during opening ceremonies that the headquarters was "an inevitable step in the company's development." About 45 per cent of business now is generated in the U.S.

Neonex

Neonex International Ltd. reports net earnings of $2.8 million (39 cents a share) for the first nine months of 1973 compared with net earnings of $2.68 million (37 cents) for the first nine months of last year.

President James Pattison said Neonex sales to Sept. 30, 1973 were $149.25 million compared with $121.33 million in the period in 1972. He said Neonex has completed arrangements to build a new mobile home manufacturing plant in Moncton, N.B.

N. Alta. Rapeseed

The installation of new equipment will increase the cost of a proposed rapeseed crushing plant here to more than $10 million from $6.5 million, said Terry Nugent, president of Northern Alberta Rapeseed Processors Ltd.

The equipment, purchased in Sweden, will result in the production of a more purified form of rapeseed protein than is available in Canada at present. Construction is expected to begin next month, with completion tentatively set for December, 1974.

CanCel

Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. reports earnings for the nine-month period ended Sept. 30, 1973, amounted to $6.15 million (51 cents a share) on sales totalling $92.2 million.

In the comparable period a year earlier, the company's predecessor, Columbia Cellulose Co. Ltd., had a net loss of $8.56 million.

President Ronald M. Gross said the nine-month earning figure did not reflect a special asset write-down on reorganization of the company, which was acquired by the provincial government earlier this year.

Refinery Hoping To Keep Options

The Shell refinery at Anacortes, a major customer of Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd., is keeping its options open about future purchases of crude oil.

Shell refinery manager A. R. Williams told The Times his company would choose between Canadian and Alaska crude when the latter becomes available.

"Our decision will be based upon a number of factors, including price," he said.

"We are keeping our options open."

While this ability to bargain would enable the refinery to get the best price, it would also provide insurance in case Alberta oil was no longer available in 1977, due to Canadian export restrictions.

"We have no assurance Canadian oil will be available so we have to be very flexible."

The Anacortes refinery has increased its rated capacity to 91,000 barrels of oil a day but, because of a Canadian cutback, Trans Mountain is authorized to sell only 80,000.

The difference is made up by tanker on a casual basis.

The Shell refinery at Anacortes already has dock facilities to handle the 70,000-ton tankers that will bring Alaska oil south. The refinery is designed to handle Alberta crude type oil but the quality varies from field to field. With minor modifications, Alaska crude can be processed.

Williams said the company was studying the options it would have in 1977 and was hopeful Canadian oil would continue to be available.

"We have no plan to switch to tankers in 1977. But then we have no plan not to. We hope we will have a choice."

SYNCRUDE EYES SECOND PLANT

CALGARY (CP) — Syncrude Canada Ltd. is considering a second oil sands plant in the Athabasca oil sands in northeast Alberta, Frank Spragins, the consortium's president was reported as saying.

He told the Calgary Albertan in a telephone interview from Edmonton that a second plant would be conditional on the success of the $800-million first plant, which the consortium, made up of Imperial Oil Ltd., Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. and Canada-Cities Service Ltd., has announced.

Spragins was asked to comment on a report by the Toronto Globe and Mail that the consortium may develop a second plant in the area by 1982.

He said a second plant is depenndent on the success of the first plant, including confirmation of the technology to be used and government support such as exemption from export tax. It will also depend on whether other companies are planning to develop oil sands plants in the area at the same time.

Syncrude's announced plant is scheduled to be completed in 1977. It will be the second oil sands plant in the Fort McMurray area 250 miles northeast of Edmonton. Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. has been operating the first oil sands plant in the area for several years.

Shell Canada Ltd. has also announced plans to develop a plant in the Athabasca oil sands. A public hearing on the Shell application will resume at the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board here Thursday.

This new position requires the ability to manage a complex of physical education and athletic facilities, including a swimming pool, in support of University academic, athletic and recreational programs. The successful applicant will have had several years of administrative experience, preferably including management of multi-purpose athletic and recreation facilities, with proven ability to co-ordinate programs in terms of facility/equipment usage, and support staff. A university degree is desirable, along with training in water safety related to swimming pools.

Duties will include operation of facilities; co-ordinating and scheduling their allocation; responsibility for maintenance of facilities and equipment; selection, training and supervision of staff; budget preparation and control; maintaining inventory of University athletic equipment.

Salary: Commensurate with experience and qualifications.

Reply in writing stating details of education and experience, University transcripts and the names of three referees who know applicant's work performance, addressed to Personnel Services, University of Victoria, P.O. Box 1700, B.C. V8W 2Y2.

Closing Date: November 16, 1973.

TWO-MONTH
GOODWILL STUDY TOUR OF SOUTH AFRICA
IN SPRING OF 1974

Opportunity for young business or professional men between the ages of 25 and 35.

The Rotary Club of Victoria is seeking two young Canadians, with the necessary qualifications, for the consideration of the Rotary District Selection Committee in connection with a two-month GOODWILL STUDY TOUR of South Africa in March and April, 1974.

A total of five outstanding young men representing a cross-section of business and professional life will be chosen. Rotary International pays return jet air fare. Travel, lodging and meals abroad will be provided by South African Rotarians.

The purpose is to offer a person-to-person opportunity for the promotion of understanding and friendly relations. Travelling with a sense of mission derived from their desire to learn and promote friendship, the five young men will explore institutions, business and the professions in South Africa and will carry with them personal knowledge of our own way of life.

To qualify a young man must be exemplary in his business or professional attitudes and in his personal conduct, presentable in appearance, able to express himself clearly and logically, and in good health. He must have a sound, general education, be enthusiastic about his chosen vocation, and have been employed in a recognized business or profession, full time, for at least two years. He must be a Canadian citizen. He must NOT be a Rotarian or the dependent or relative or a Rotarian.

Preliminary written applications with full particulars should be addressed to the President, Rotary Club of Victoria, Empress Hotel, Victoria, B.C., and postmarked not later than November 15th, 1973.

Teapot Dome Echoes Heard in Watergate

WASHINGTON (CP) — An embattled president, a former attorney-general under indictment, resignations, misuse of powers. . . .

Washington, 1973? Yes, but also Washington, 1923—for this is the golden anniversary of scandal in politics.

It was just 50 years ago, in the same caucus room now given over to the Senate Watergate hearings, that a gavel sounded to begin the Teapot Dome investigation.

When it was over, the name of a small hill in Wyoming—too small to make the index in most atlases—had made the history books as a synonym for corruption.

The central figure in the Teapot Dome Scandal was Warren G. Harding, 29th president of the United States, who died in office slightly more than two months before the investigation began.

If Harding was one of the weakest of U.S. presidents, his successor—Calvin Coolidge—must be ranked at least in this context, among the strongest.

History books paint Harding as a reluctant president who did little during his 2½ years in office, a man easily manipulated, a man who had little control over events that swirled around him.

It was in state politics that Harding fell under the influence of a shrewd political strategist named Harry M. Daugherty who—with Harding's wife Florence—pushed and manoeuvred the Ohio publisher toward the White House. Harding named Daugherty his attorney-general.

Daugherty wasn't the only old friend Harding brought to Washington. There were so many of them, they became known as "the Ohio gang" even before corruption began to become evident.

A depression in the farm section of the country in 1921 had cost the Republican party dearly in the 1922 congressional elections and Harding—his own term scheduled to end 18 months later—set out on a tour to restore confidence in his administration.

But already there were disclosures of corruption.

Just before Harding began his tour, Jesse W. Smith, a crony of Daugherty, killed himself and it was disclosed that Smith had been rigging settlements between the justice department and criminals.

Veterans' Bureau director Charles Forbes went to prison for misuse of funds and bureau legal adviser Charles Cramer committed suicide.

Harding and his entourage continued west. He visited Vancouver—the first U.S. president to set foot in Canada while in office. He went on to Alaska.

Somewhere along the way, a long, coded telegram came from Wasnington and a shaken president asked reporters what a president could do when his friends betrayed him.

The message informed the president that the Senate was about to investigate the granting of oil leases.

Teapot Dome was on the horizon.

Harding became ill—the report was food poisoning—as his train moved south through Seattle. His condition did not improve and the tour was halted in San Francisco where the diagnosis was pneumonia.

He died Aug. 2 and there was no inquest or autopsy—cause of death is not known to this day.

His wife burned as many of Harding's papers as she could, to protect his memory. Mrs. Harding died the following year.

Coolidge was sworn in as president by his father, a notary public, in the dining room of the family farm in Vermont. He made no move to shield the guilty in the various instances of corruption that had flourished during his predecessor's time in office.

In 1924, he forced the resignation of Daugherty and others. The former attorney-general later was indicted over incidents concerning the Alien Property Custodian's Office. Two juries failed to agree on a verdict and he was freed.

Meanwhile, the Senate investigation into the granting of oil leases found that, at the urging of Interior Secretary Albert Fall, Harding had signed an executive order transferring oil leases at Elk Hills and Teapot Dome from the navy to the interior department.

Fall leased the Elk Hills reserve in California to Edward Doheny of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company. Teapot Dome reserves went to Harry F. Sinclair's Mammoth Oil Co.

In neither case had there been public notice or competitive bidding.

The investigation disclosed that Fall had accepted bribes of at least $100,000 from Doheny and $300,000 from Sinclair. He was jailed and fined $100,000.

Fall is the only cabinet minister ever to serve a prison term for activities connected with government service.

Navy Secretary Edwin Denby also resigned but was never charged.

To replace Daugherty, Coolidge appointed Harlan Fiske Stone, whose first move was to revamp the Bureau of Investigation into the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), fire the director and promote the young assistant director, J. Edgar Hoover.

Teapot Dome dragged on through the 1920s into the Depression era. It was 1931 before Fall—and Sinclair—finally went to prison for brief terms.

There is one more parallel between Teapot Dome and Watergate.

In both cases, credit—at least in part—for bringing the facts to light, was given to crusading newspapers.

Canada Savings Bonds
Here are the facts:

Who may buy Canada Savings Bonds?

Every bona fide Canadian resident (adult or minor) may buy Canada Savings Bonds. To qualify as a Canadian resident an individual must normally reside in Canada for the major part of the year and have a Canadian address. Estates of deceased persons may also buy Canada Savings Bonds.

Is the amount which may be bought limited?

Yes. This year the limit has been set at $50,000. A registered owner may not hold or have an interest in bonds of the new Series in excess of this limit. The limit may be exceeded, however, where excess bonds are acquired by inheritance upon the death of a registered owner.

Can I cash Canada Savings Bonds at any time?

Yes. Your Canada Savings Bonds can be cashed at any time at their full face value plus earned interest. Interest is calculated at the appropriate annual coupon rate for each full month which has elapsed since the date of the last matured coupon. To cash your Bond, just take it to your bank and complete the redemption form on the front. You'll get your money immediately. Canada Savings Bonds are instant cash.

Where do I buy Canada Savings Bonds?

You may buy your Canada Savings Bonds from any authorized sales agent including any Bank or authorized Investment Dealer, Stock Broker, Trust or Loan Company and Credit Union.

Bonds may be purchased for cash, or by monthly instalments on the Official Monthly Savings Plan. Under this Plan bonds may be purchased up to and including November 15, 1973, for a down payment of 5% of face value, followed by 10 monthly payments of 9% each, commencing December 1, and a final payment of 5% on October 1, 1974, plus accrued interest at the rate of 7.54% per annum on the declining balance of the amount outstanding. This accrued interest totals $3.46 per $100 face value.

Canada Savings Bonds may also be bought at work by regular payroll deduction. Your employer will have full details of this Payroll Savings Plan.

What is the price of Canada Savings Bonds?

You may buy your Canada Savings Bonds up to and including November 15, 1973 at face value. Up to that date there is no charge for accrued interest. After that date, interest at the rate of 7.54% per year will be charged from November 1 to the end of the month in which you buy your Bonds.

What denominations are available?

Coupon Bonds are available in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $25,000. Coupon bonds have interest coupons and Compound Interest Certificates attached.

Fully Registered Bonds in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $25,000 are available in two different forms. The first form is registered as to both interest and principal, and interest is payable annually by cheque — in this form the Bond does not have the special Compound Interest feature. The second form is also registered as to both interest and principal but does offer the special Compound Interest feature. However, in this case, payment of accumulated interest is deferred until redemption of the Bond.

What happens if Canada Savings Bonds are lost or stolen?

Lost, stolen or destroyed bonds will be replaced upon satisfactory proof of loss or destruction, and the production of a bond of indemnity. Notify the Bank of Canada, Ottawa, and your local police of the loss, giving full details, the denominations, and if possible, the serial numbers.

How long are Canada Savings Bonds on sale?

Sale of the new Bonds may be discontinued at any time after November 15, 1973 at the discretion of the Minister of Finance.

Teacher Appeals

Kenneth Beattie, former Oak Bay junior secondary school teacher whose dismissal was upheld this week by a board of reference, said Wednesday he plans to appeal the board's decision to the courts.

Beattie was fired by Greater Victoria school board last April for refusing to obey a board order to return to work, and appealed the firing to the three-man board of reference.

He has 30 days after the board of reference decision is announced to appeal the decision to then county or supreme court.

Art Showcase In Nanaimo

NANAIMO — The 14-day Regional Arts Council's autumn showcase, featuring art in all its forms, opens here Friday.

An arts and crafts exhibition, drama, a band concert, poetry reading are included in the program. There will also be a variety of workshops with demonstrations of pottery, macrame, weaving, flower craft, dancing, rock and mineral crafts.

Mines Department Closer to Split

Debate in the B.C. legislature dragged Wednesday as opposition members again played their old song of "blank cheque legislation" and "sweeping government powers."

This time debate centred on the new Department of Mines and Petroleum Resources Act, finally approved in principle after nearly three hours of discussion.

Approval was granted in a 34-to-15 vote with the opposition combining against the bill.

The main purpose of the act is to split the department into two branches, mineral resources and petroleum resources, and give each its own deputy minister.

Opposition reaction, however, came over another section of the bill which consolidates powers already available to the government by enabling it to buy into equity positions with private mining and petroleum industries.

"What it is really is iron-heeled socialism in full bloom," Jim Chabot (SC-Columbia River) charged.

Not only does the bill give the government "broad powers" to take over private firms, Chabot said, but it will "emasculate the power of this legislative assembly" by allowing cabinet to decide on the takeovers.

He suggested the government is harboring an "insidious" plan to decrease exploration and mining production to such a low level to facilitate easy take-over.

Two Liberal members, David Anderson (Victoria) and Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) said the government, in this and previous legislation, is fostering uncertainty and confusion in the mining industry.

Socred Ed Smith (North Peace River) said the act should be renamed the Mines and Petroleum Resources Industry Abolition Act since it gives the government "unbridled" powers to buy out industries.

In a separate development, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick introduced amendments to the Mineral Act which have the effect of restoring the former $5 charge to prospectors who file mineral claims on land. Under legislation passed by the government this spring, which raised the ire of the mining industry, the charge had been put up to $10.

Another provision of the amendments is that a miner cannot be denied an application for a production lease on his mineral land, as had been feared by the industry in the former legislaton.

Given approval in principle in the legislature were the following measures related to mining and resources: the Geo-thermal Resources Act and amendments to the Mines Regulations Act and the Coal Mines Regulations Act.

Given final third-reading approval were: the Farm Products Industry Improvement Act, the Pacific North Coast Native Co-Operative Act and amendments to the Succession Duty Act, the Taxation Act and the Provincial Home Acquisition Act.

Licence Fee Cut

Large reductions in the cost of annual licence fees for motor homes are included in legislation introduced in the house Wednesday by Transport Minister Robert Strachan.

Amendments to the Motor Vehicle Act deal mainly with housekeeping measures and bring the legislation in line with the government's new compulsory automobile insurance scheme.

The new, lower licence fees for motor homes bring B.C. in line with the rest of Canada, Strachan said, adding that B.C. residents are now paying "exorbitant" fees.

For vehicles 5,000 pounds or less, the new fee is $20, down from $55; for those 5,001 to 7,000 pounds, the fee is $30 compared to $95 before; and for vehicles more than 7,000 pounds the charge is $40, down from $115.

The amendment bill also requires all automobile dealers obtain special liability insurance to cover demonstrator vehicles.

Under the new government insurance, which comes into effect March 1, 1974, each driver is insured rather than each car and thus special provisions are needed for cars sitting on sales lots.

Individual car salesmen licences are abolished, leaving each dealer responsible for the business conduct of his employees, and eliminating the policing job formerly done by the government in supervising salesmen licensing.

Drag Racers Lose Option

DUNCAN — Haida Park Raceways, an organization formed to promote drag raeing in this area, has lost an option to purchase land behind Shawnigan Lake.

A spokesman for the organization said other possibilities for land are being checked.

"The need for this is great, but what we really need now is lots of support behind this venture," he said.

WIDOWS BENEFIT FROM ACT CHANGES

B.C. government employees' widows who subsequently remarry will no longer have their superannuation allowances cut off, or reduced according to new legislation introduced in the house Wednesday.

Amendments to the Municipal Superannuation Act, the Public Service Superannuation Act and the Teachers' Pension Act rule that as of Nov. 1 any widow receiving monthly superannuation paymens will not have her allowance affected by reason of remarriage.

As it stands now widows are paid a lump sum on remarriage which equals the difference between the total amount payable in a superannuation refund and the amount already granted the widow.

Any widow who has been cut off previous to this legislation will have her allowance resumed at the same level, without any charge, if she did not receive a lump sum when the allowance was originally terminated.

If the widow did receive a lump sum and ment, she may either pay back the sum and continue receiving equal allowances, or can decline to pay back the sum and receive a new allowance "reduced by an amount that is the actuarial equivalent of the lump-sum payment received by her."

Other changes in the Public Service Superannuation Act will allow the superannuation fund to invest in credit unions and in securities of municipalities, the Greater Vancouver Water District or the Greater Vancouver Sewerage and Drainage District.

Municipal superannuation funds will also be allowed to invest in the debentures or other securities of the Municipal Finace Authority of B.C., a body which now makes investments for municipalities.

Farm May Ooze Into Trench

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A new Capital Regional District soil removal bylaw will come too late to help a Langford man who fears he'll spend the winter watching his farmland slide into a ditch.

"The soil hasn't started to move yet, but it may when we get heavier rain," said Barry Fisher of 3108 Glen Lake Road.

Fisher's 20-acre farm borders on an eight-acre strip of land sold recently to a contractor for its topsoil value. Both areas are composed of a rich and oozing topsoil known as "peat-muck" which sells for up to $5.50 a cubic yard.

Fisher farms his land but the contractor next door is only interested in hauling out the valuable topsoil, Fisher said.

He complained to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer and has been informed the minister has asked Agriculture Minister David Stupich for a report.

The contractor dug a 600-foot trench next to Fisher's property and a month ago began hauling out topsoil, Fisher said.

"This soil is very fluid and with extra rain, my land will start filling up this trench for the contractor.

"We need a soil removal bylaw to stop this, but it's not through yet. The only thing that will stop them is a court injunction."

The regional district's soil removal bylaw, which would require a contractor wanting to remove topsoil to prove that it would not damage adjoining land, was approved last week by the board and is now waiting for approval by the municipal affairs minister.

Fisher's field is low-lying and floods two or three feet in the winter, putting enough pressure on it to cause it to slide into the adjoining trench, he said.

"That piece of land is too low to build on. It's only good for farmland, but the contractor bought it just to desecrate it, not to farm it," Fisher said.

But the land isn't selling at farmland prices.

"I wanted to buy it to add to my farm, but the price was about $35,000 and that's topsoil price, not farm price and there's no way it's worth $35,000 for farmland.

"There are many places contractors can take topsoil from where it doesn't do any harm, but when it's prime farmland they're defacing, it's a real shame."

If Fisher's land slides away this winter, it won't be his family's first such experience.

"About 20 years ago, when my father had the farm, a neighbor dug trenches for excavating and some of our land slid into the trenches — some of our fence posts sank almost two feet."

The Glen Lake Ratepayers' Association is also concerned about the situation because when the trenches fill with soil and become "boggy and swamp-like," the spring runoff will carry the bog directly into Glen Lake.

"If the contractor is taking the soil out, he should have to fill up the hole with gravel before the winter to stop Fisher's soil from falling into the trench and to stop the drainage into Glen Lake," John Williams, associate president, said.

Bitterman On Ballot —Judge

Henry Bitterman is back in the race.

Provincial court judge F. S. Green ruled today that Bitterman's nomination papers for an aldermanic seat on Victoria city council must be accepted by the returning officer Morran Waller.

Bitterman's candidacy was thrown into dispute Monday when Waller refused to accept the papers, saying the real estate operator was involved in an expropriation proceeding with the city and therefore ineligible for office.

Judge Green ruled today that because the expropriation bylaw had never been filed with the Victoria Land Registry office, the proceeding was not valid and could not be used to block Bitterman's candidacy.

Open Space Closed

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Open Space today became a closed space, and it will remain closed until work has been completed to meet fire safety standards.

Gene Miller, director of the arts centre at 510 Fort, gave that assurance to city aldermen today, after being told council was not prepared to continue tolerating a potential fire hazard in the community.

At the fire committee meeting, Mayor Peter Pollen told Miller: "If there's a flash fire in that place and 40 or 50 kids are burned the first one to get hung is the mayor . . ."

Pollen said so much "indulgence" had been extended toward Open Space in the past that council had placed lives in jeopardy. That tolerance had to end now, he said, even if it meant the extreme step of closing down the converted warehouse.

Brandishing a two-inch-thick file of correspondence — "the thickest file we've had in all my years with the department" — Fire Chief Eric Simmons said his department had "bent over backwards" to cooperate with Open Space and sympathize with its financial difficulties.

"But I've come to the end of my sympathy," he said. "I think the time has come to bring to the public's attention that this man (Miller) thumbs his nose at the regulations; and that he is placing people who occupy that building in danger."

★

Simmons said the department's problems with Miller dated back to July, 1972, and he had consistently failed to comply with the requirements of the Fire Marshal's office.

As a result, he said, Miller was prosecuted last June and found guilty on four charges. But Miller was continuing to open the building to public use, without the work being carried out and in contravention of the regulations.

Simmons said he was now preparing the information to lay three further charges against Miller.

"He keeps putting people in there and we keep telling him not to. He knows the law but, frankly, he keeps thumbing his nose at us," Simmons told the committee.

When Simmons referred to a "page and half" of work items requiring attention, Miller said they were mainly minor jobs such as filling cracks between wallboards and changing exit signs.

★

He said he was confident the work could be completed within two days.

Outside the committee room, Miller told the Times he may have to arrange alternative accommodation for the "People Show" of improvisational theatre scheduled to play at Open Space this weekend.

He said one of the facts not brought out at the meeting was that his revised plans submitted to the Fire Marshal's office in Vancouver "sat on their desks for five or six weeks while they were on vacation."

A crafts fair at Open Space was closed last Christmas on orders of the fire and health departments.

LUNATIC POT TEMPEST!

Gene Miller, director of the Open Space arts centre on Fort Street, admitted to city aldermen today that he agrees a poster advertising a recent art exhibition there was in "poor taste."

Miller agreed with comments expressed by Mayor Peter Pollen deploring the poster's illustration of a vulva. But, in a memorandum circulated to Group A committee, Miller said rejection of the poster would have signified to the artists concerned "the rejection by Open Space of their values and integrity."

Pollen said flatly he was not prepared to spend his time discussing whether the poster was or was not obscene.

"I have had people from your organization come into my waiting room, act like animals, tear up paper and throw it on the floor and yell obscenities," he told Miller.

"It's becoming a tempest in a lunatic pot."

Miller replied the person Pollen was referring to was one of the artists, and not connected with the Open Space centre.

Legal Snag Hits Sale Of Theatre

Negotiations by Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay to buy the Royal Theatre have hit a legal snag which may require the intervention of Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer.

The stumbling block is a section of the Municipal Act which states that no municipality can have title to property beyond its boundaries without going to the voters in a referendum.

The three municipalities have agreed to buy the theatre from Famous Players for $250,000. Victoria's share would be $110,050, Saanich would pay $106,025 and Oak Bay, $33,925.

None of the mayors involved consider the legal snag insurmountable and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis reports the municipalities' solicitors are combining efforts to overcome the problem.

"We have two alternatives," Curtis said. "The city could hold title and an agreement be drawn up that would protect the interests of the other two municipalities. In that case, Saanich would give a grant.

"The other alternative would be to have the department of municipal affairs find some other option for us."

Describing the problem as "very minor," Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said she didn't think it feasible that the city could purchase the theatre with grants from Oak Bay and Saanich.

"I can't really see us explaining away a grant to the rich city of Victoria," she said.

"It was just unfortunate, perhaps, that none of us asked our solicitors if there would be any problems," she added, "I think it would be a great shame if this was made into an election issue or anything of that sort at this time."

If the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee had known of the legal snag before negotiations began, Elford said, there still wouldn't have been time to hold a referendum before the Oct. 15 deadline.

"A referendum is a costly matter and if you have to put it over the three municipalities it's a waste of thousands of dollars," she said.

She suggested special provincial legislation could be passed to amend the Municipal Act section which is causing the problem.

This was done when the core municipalities faced a similar situation in the cost sharing of the Centennial Stadium, sited on the University of Victoria's grounds.

That was in March 1966 when Municipal Affairs Minister Dave Campbell made amendments to the Municipalities Validating and Enabling Act in the annual omnibus bill.

The amendment to permit the municipalities, the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee and the university to share costs read "it is declared to be lawful . . . and binding on all parties."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, who has headed the drive to purchase the theatre, said today the legal snag doesn't pose any significant obstacle to the closing of the deal with Famous Players.

"Where there is goodwill among the parties concerned a solution can always be found to such technicalities," he observed.

Temperature Dropping

Victoria temperatures were low but Vancouver ones were lower overnight.

Temperatures at Victoria International Airport dropped to 36 degrees overnight, cool but a long way from the record low of 31.

At Vancouver international airport the mercury dipped to 30 degrees, the lowest for Nov. 1 since 1951 when it was 26 degrees.

The Victoria weather office says temperatures will be a little lower Friday if the weather stays clear.

In the interior, Smithers had a low of 26 and Cranbrook 27.

Pranksters 'Ground' Policemen

Halloween pranksters hit the Victoria City Police garage on Fisgard Street Wednesday night and their actions resulted in several grounded motorcycle policemen early today.

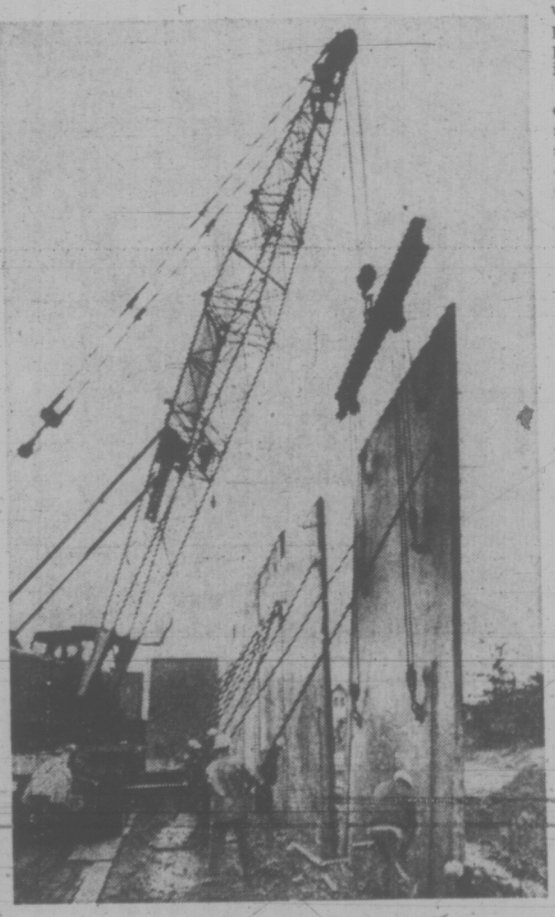

A police spokesman said the pranksters sneaked into the garage and turned on the ignitions of the parked motorcycles.

By this morning, the batteries were dead and required re-charging before the policemen could get on with their rounds.

There are no suspects as yet, the spokesman said.

BURNING CROSS 10 feet high was thrown on the lawn of Dr. T. C. Todd, 70 Beach Drive, Wednesday night. Oak Bay police say it was a Halloween prank, and that several boys were seen running from the home by a neighbor. See also Page 24. (Irving Strickland photo.)

C. Saanich May Again Appeal Police Ruling

Central Saanich police constable James Earl will not know until Monday at the earliest whether he will get his job back, or whether his case will go to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Earl, dismissed Jan. 15, will be re-hired if Central Saanich accepts a decision from the B.C. Appeal Court Tuesday, but Mayor Archie Galbraith said today council will not act until it receives a report from the solicitor, Darrall Collins.

Collins said his summation of the Appeal Court ruling and recommendations regarding the case might be ready when council meets Monday.

He wouldn't say whether he will suggest the municipality take the case to the Supreme Court.

The controversy started when Central Saanich fired Earl shortly after a police union was formed.

Earl said the dismissal resulted from his involvement with the union.

The B.C. Labor Relations board supported the police officer and ordered Central Saanich to re-hire him and to compensate him for lost wages. The ruling was appealed.

Mr. Justice Victori Dryer of the B.C. Supreme Court decided the board did not have the power to order C. Saanich to reinstate Earl.

Dryer ruled that policemen are not employees in the ordinary sense.

The Labor Board has jurisdiction only over persons officially classified as "employees." This was appealed by the LRB.

The argument advanced by the board, and accepted by the Appeal Court, asserts the board has the power to define who is an employee.

Earl said the long judicial procedings have been caused by the Central Saanich mayor pursuing the case for political reason.

He declined to say what those political reasons are.

Galbraith said Earl was discharged for "good and proper reason," but declined to say publicly what they are.

The reasons behind dismissal may be obtained, Galbraith added, by any person who goes to the municipal office and asks to read the documents on the case.

Ask The Times

Q. How many seats are there in the Memorial Arena? How many are in the blues? How many tickets are put on sale for the ordinary public, for events such as the touring NHL teams? How do people get tickets before the opening of such a sale? If the arena is supported by the city of Victoria, who looks after to see that things are done fairly and in the interest of the general public?—T.A.

A. There are 5,021 seats. None are divided into a "blue" section, and prices vary for different events. All tickets are put on sale to the public, but season ticketholders are given first chance at the seats. The arena once let people reserve tickets before they came on sale, but the policy has been discontinued. The city's parks and recreation committee is responsible for the arena. Chairman is Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

Handicapped Are Heard

Physically handicapped British Columbians have experienced years of frustration because they have been separated from the making of policy which affects their lives, M. Merle Smith of the department of human resources said today.

Smith is chairman of a conference being held in Victoria this week which is aimed at ending that separation. Some 50 delegates, most of them physically handicapped, have been invited by Human Resources Minister Norman Levi to discuss their needs.

For the past two days they have been divided into workshops to discuss architectural barriers, employment, education, income security, in-home care and transportation. The groups will table their recommendations on these subjects when the conference ends later today.

"There has been a lot of frustration in the past," Smith, who is herself confined to a wheelchair, observed this morning. "Before the only contact many of these people had with those who made policy was perhaps through a letter or an occasional meeting with one minister.

"At this conference we've had almost all the ministers over here, and their deputies."

She said the views presented by the delegates — some of whom are just individually concerned — are "not necessarily innovative because people have been thinking about them for a long time. But this is the first time these views have been aired, in many cases."

The workshops have been instructed to consider both short-term and long-term goals of government policy effecting the handicapped, she said.

At a dinner given by the government Wednesday night, Levi told the conference participants he expected there would be another conference within a year at which the handicapped persons would be invited to express their opinions to the cabinet and senior civil servants.

Highways to Bare Park Widening Plan

Highways Minister Graham Lea promised to release tentative engineering plans for widening the highway through Goldstream Park and some alternative routes, Ken Gibbard, president of the Victoria Sierra Club, said today.

Gibbard was a member of a group of environmentalists who met the minister today to discuss the preservation of Goldstream Park, threatened by the widening proposal.

"The interview was most encouraging," he said. "We asked the minister to supply us with some plans for widening the one-mile route through the park. He (the minister) was frank and open."

Val Gislason, president of the Wildlife Action Committee, said Lea told them it was a difficult problem because motorists are of two minds on the widening proposal.

"That is when a motorist wants to get to Nanaimo quickly he wants a four-lane highway through the park," she said. "But the next day if he is picnicking in the park, he is in favor of keeping the route as it is."

She said the minister also told them consideration must be given to other means of transport.

She quoted Lea as saying "we can't go on facilitating the private car forever."

The group also suggested the highways take over the E and N railway right-of-way on the west side of the park and use it as an alternative route.

Cougars: Consistency And Some 19-Year-Olds

There were fewer than 1,000 hockey fans at Memorial Arena on Tuesday night, hardly enough to make a buck for the Cougars of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League. (And the same thing can be said for the turnouts at the Maple Leaf games in the Pacific Coast Amateur League).

And there has been talk, too, that if the Cougars don't make a success this season, then a move to another city will be considered as being in the better interests of the team. And nobody can blame general manager Eric Bishop and his board of directors for at least harboring such a thought. Because, frankly, people just haven't been coming out to the games.

Of course, all the world loves a winner, and so do the fans; and as the Cougars didn't exactly get off and running on the victory parade this year—five straight losses on the road being the first immediate disaster, well . . . that's the problem.

So coach Ollie Dorohoy was the man to ask. A former player in the old Pacific Coast Hockey League and later the Western League, Dorohoy answered as he played, honestly.

"I know where my troubles are—on defence—and also I can't get the consistency I would like out of my forward lines. One night one plays well, another night, two lines go good, but we need all three to do well."

Body Work a Requisite

That and hitting. "I think we get better results when we start to use the body like little Peter Morris was doing on Tuesday," he said. "He took on anybody, hit with good, sound checks, and has played well in every game. But that's what we need a little more of, not stick work, but solid hits."

The "stick work" was a reference to some of the intimidation tactics of New Westminster Bruins, Tuesday's opponents, which precipitated a few fights, "but our boys aren't taught that type of hockey," Ollie continued.

His best line? "No doubt about it—Morris, (Derek) Haas and (Brian) Day." Haas got three goals Tuesday. "He's good, and going to get better," Ollie predicted. "He's got good hockey sense."

Dorohoy also had kind remarks for young Tim Williams, a rookie who scored two goals. "He's a fine, offensive player, makes a few mistakes on defence, but then he's only a kid, isn't he? And he's got a good attitude to go with a great shot."

So the Cougars have won only two games . . . "I guess you could say it's my 19-year olds," he explained. "There are five that haven't got what I want out of them; and we have to have that to win. Their attitude will have to change a bit. If we get that improvement, then I can see hope in the future."

Dorohoy also put it squarely on the line. "I'll change if I have to." In that regard he said "I was quite happy with Danny Rogers," last year's alternate goalkeeper with the Cougars who was brought down from Nanaimo for the game.

"I thought he played well, I was impressed; and I don't think he could be faulted for four of the goals. We gave them up, we coughed up the puck, twice in our end, twice in their end."

Player Lift to Continue

Then another fault, consistent with that lack-of-consistency approach. "Some players don't realize this is a game of 60 minutes, not 20 or 40. So we'll continue to bring in kids from Nanaimo; the others have been told. Of defencemen Bruce Van Camp, who got a look-see Tuesday: "A little nervous, some mistakes . . . and I like Gordon Genereux (another recruit from Nanaimo) too. At least he plays the man."

About trades for defensive help. "We're trying, but hell, they want a cruiser for a rowboat. Bray (the player originally assigned to the Cougars in the Kim Clackson deal) looked good, and would have helped. But when he quit, he told us 'it was no sudden decision." He had decided to go back to school."

Until those trades, if they occur . . . "well, I may bring in Wade Smith from Nanaimo. I think he's good enough. Besides, bringing in people will keep the others on their toes.

In summary, no rash promises, just a job to do. "If we can win our home games, most of them, pick up an odd point here and there on the road, tighten up that defence, and just be a little more consistent . . .

"You know, sometimes they don't look that bad. But we have to work on it, and if we do, it'll come. I'm sure of that.

"But it's up to them."

Coaches Hit the Roof

By The Canadian Press

Coach Jack Gordon of Minnesota North Stars was incensed with his club's 5-0 loss to Boston Bruins in one of three National Hockey League games Wednesday night and ordered twice-daily workouts for the North Stars, starting today.

In other action Wednesday, Pittsburgh Penguins and Montreal Canadiens battled to a 1-1 tie and Buffalo Sabres edged California Golden Seals 3-1.

Gordon said, "It was a disgrace. If you're not in shape physically, you're not mentally prepared."

The loss was the fifth for the North Stars who also have six ties.

Phil Esposito of Boston scored his 14th goal of the season in the game, to maintain his string of scoring in all 10 Bruins' games.

The Canadiens and Penguins met in a lifeless contest in Montreal.

"We played a lousy game," said coach Scotty Bowman of the Canadiens, "We had no momentum."

But Bowman's main concern was the work of referee Wally Harris, who was berated for most of the coach's post-game news conference.

"This guy is a lousy referee," barked Bowman. "He's afraid to give a penalty in this building."

Bowman felt Harris missed a couple of penalty calls in the third period and called for too many face-offs in the Penguins end.

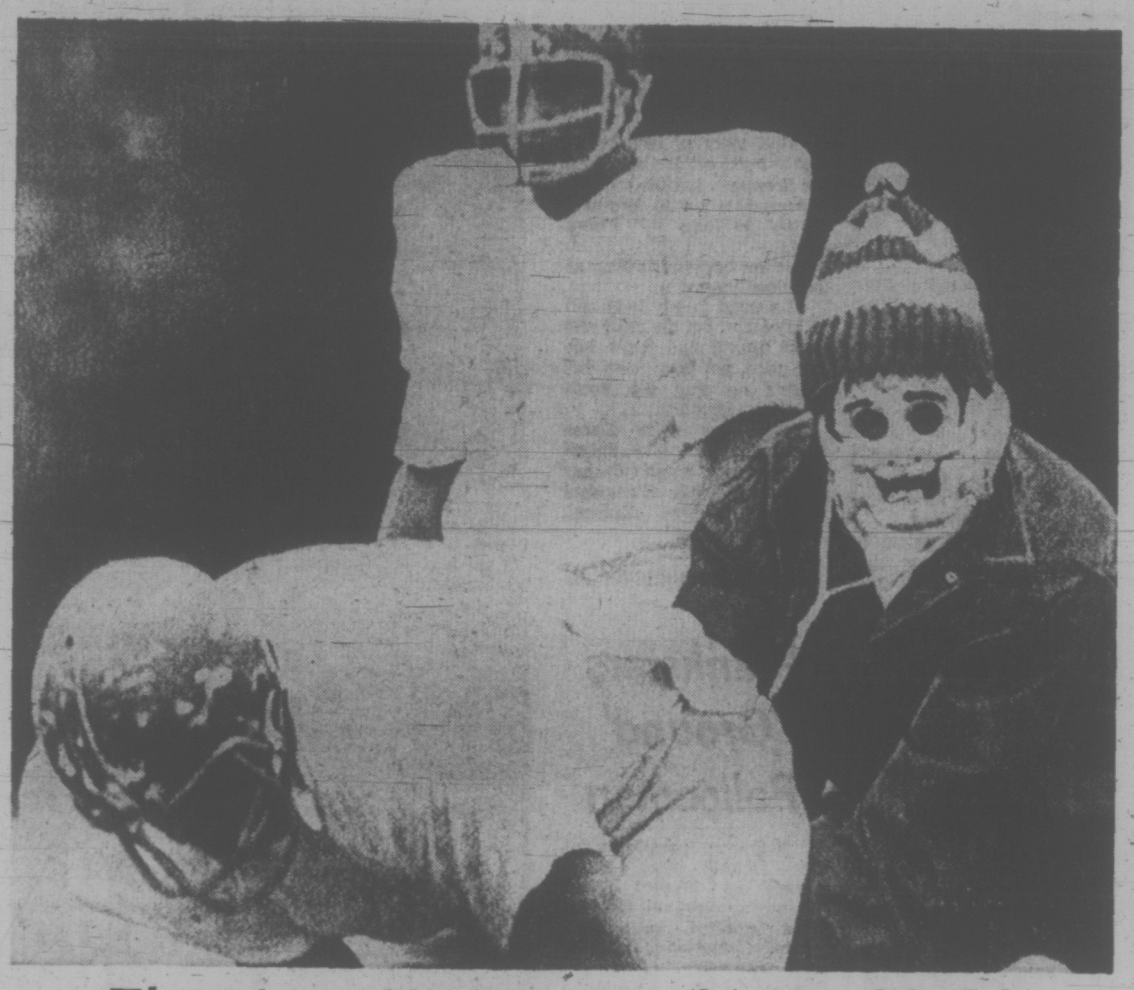

Pittsburgh coach Ken Schinkel said the Penguins played the same style of game against Montreal as they did Sunday when they bombed New York Rangers 7-2.

"We stuck to the basics of hockey. We didn't lose too many draws in our own end tonight. They didn't get one clean draw from us which they did last week in Pittsburgh and cost us the game."

In the Buffalo-California game, Richard Martin scored three goals, one in each period, to lead the Sabres to their win over the Golden Seals. Martin now has 19 goals and nine assists for 19 points, good enough for second spot in the NHL's scoring race. Esposito leads with 24 points.

There was something different on display when North Carolina State football team went through training session Wednesday. Head coach Lou Holtz, stepping into quarterback spot on this drill, directed club while wearing monster mask and stocking cap. Holtz wouldn't explain whether he was trying to frighten his charges into better performances or was wearing mask because it was Halloween.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Ollie Gets Good Word

The news relayed to Victoria Cougars was not the first-good, then-bad kind Wednesday. Mainly, it was good.

From an x-ray lab, the Western Canada Junior Hockey League team received news that an injury suffered by defenceman Rick Williams is not serious.

The diagnosis is a torn muscle in his left shoulder. Williams, injured in Tuesday's 6-6 tie with New Westminster Bruins, is expected to be available Saturday when Cougars entertain Edmonton Oil Kings at Memorial Arena.

From Calgary, Cougars considered the Centennial's 3-2 victory over Edmonton as good news.

With only one victory in six starts and opening a five-game road trip, the Oil Kings have yet to show the form that carried them to a first-place finish in the Western Division last season.

If there are important points to be taken from Edmonton, Cougar coach Ollie Dorohoy figures "this could be the year." Things could change, he admits, but Dorohoy is tempted to list Edmonton with the Bruins and Kamloops Chiefs as the clubs Cougars "must beat out" for a playoff berth.

Grant Mulvey's goal with 41 seconds remaining in regulation time gave Calgary its victory and spoiled a sparkling 33-stop display by Edmonton goalie Larry Hendrick.

Crusaders Hold Hull; Quebec Trips Blazers

By The Canadian Press

Coach Bill Needham told Cleveland Crusaders to let rival Bobby Hull "do his thing," and it paid off in a 6-4 win over Winnipeg Jets.

In the only other World Hockey Association game Wednesday night, Quebec Nordiques did what they do best—hustle—to defeat Vancouver Blazers 5-1 for their fourth win in a row.

At the end of the evening, the Nordiques were in sole possession of first place in the East Division with 16 points, one more than New England Whalers and two ahead of Cleveland.

The Jets, with three defeats and a tie in their last four games, remained deadlocked for second in the West with Houston Aeros and Minnesota Fighting Saints, all with nine points.

Needham said the key to stopping Winnipeg's line of Hull, Norm Beaudin and Chris Bordeleau "is letting Hull freewheel and do his thing."

"All we have to do with Hull is let the wing on his side skate up and down with him all evening. We want to run at Beaudin and Bordeleau—we can't let them run free."

Briefly in the second period, it appeared the Crusaders' plan had backfired, Hull grabbed the puck at centre and outskated his opponents before beating goalie Gerry Cheevers on a breakaway, giving Winnipeg a 2-1 lead.

Danny Spring added another goal a few minutes later to give the Jets a 3-1 margin.

The Crusaders, however, got three goals before the period ended and outscored the Jets 2-1 in the final 20 minutes for their sixth win against a defeat and two ties.

Jim Wiste scored the winning goal when he beat Joe Daley at 13:31 of the third, snapping a 4-4 tie. Wayne Hillman added the insurance marker into an empty net at 19:39 with Daley on the bench for an extra player.

"We've got a small team so we've got to skate," said coach Jacques Plante after his Nordiques outshot the Blazers 24-19 before 7,406 fans in Vancouver.

"We've got to play basic hockey, headman the puck, chase it, play good positional hockey. We played our game well tonight because Vancouver wasn't skating."

Five players shared Quebec's scoring with Rejean Houle, formerly of Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League, getting the winner midway through the first. It was Houle's sixth goal of the year.

Trevino, Aussie On Top

SYDNEY (AP) — Lee Trevino and little-known young Australian, Stewart Ginn, shared the lead with five-under par 68s n the first round of the $74,500 Chrysler Classic golf tourney today.

Trevino delighted the Australian gallery with his customary mix of patter and putts around the 6,850-yard Lakes golf course.

After bogeying the par-four first hole when he overhit a three wood to a bunker, Trevino rapidly got on top of the tricky course in the bright sunshine which followed morning rain.

"I think I can make quite a few birdies here," said Trevino, a hot favorite to win the $14,900 first prize. "It's just a case of holding down the bogeys."

He was matched by the 25-year-old Ginn, playing in the same trio.

The gallery gave the players some trouble because of inadequate marshalling.

Trevino cracked: "I've just finished two weeks in Japan. There they gouge your eyes out with umbrellas . . . Here they just step on your heels."

Another American, Jim Colbert, shared third position at 69 with Australian Bob Shearer.

Veteran Sam Snead of the United States included 36 putts in his fat 77, and mourned later: "I got punch-drunk missing them. I got only two from over two feet."

Vikings Go White and Blue

Both teams will be under expert guidance during the annual University of Victoria Vikings' inter-squad game starting at 7 p.m. Friday in the UVic gymnasium.

John Olsen, the provincial coach, will plan strategy for the white squad and national coach Jack Donohue will be directing the blue team.

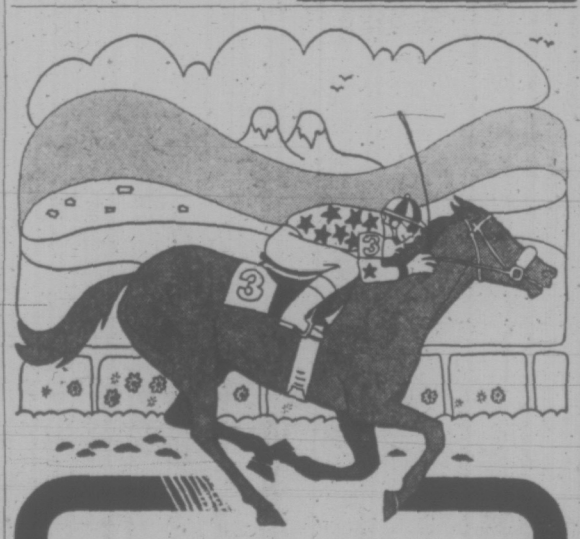

Dave Mulcahy, Jim Hunter, Pard Hogweide, Gordon Hoshal, Bert Zethof and Mark Campbell make up the whites while Tom Holmes, Lee Edmondson, Jim Duddridge, Harry Hunter, Dean Sawyer and Brian Wright comprise the blues.

A registration session for a basketball clinic, scheduled to start at 9 a.m. Saturday, will be held prior to the game, beginning at 6:30.

Following the exhibition, clinic participants as well as former Viking players and coaches are invited to attend the second annual reunion "smoker" starting at 8:30 in the faculty lounge.

The clinic registration fee of $10 includes admission to the game, smoker and a season's pass to Viking home games.

During the course of the clinic, Olsen will conduct a lesson on shooting skills, Donohue will talk on man-to-man defence and construction of an offence under international rules, Viking coach Gary Taylor will lecture on building the fast break and Don Horwood, who guided Oak Bay to the B.C. high school title last year, will discuss coaching philosophy.

Another big reason to go to the races...

Second-Half Woes Expose Columbians' Sorry Secret

THE SOCCER SCENE

By Max Low

Manager Peter Scott agrees when it is suggested that the story of Olympic Columbians is the saddest one in the B.C. Soccer League.

In seven games they have lost three heartbreakers (two by one goal), tied three times and have scored 22 goals, second highest in the league.

And so, despite the high goal production, an obviously talent-laden team lies 10th out of 12 clubs.

They were at it again at Royal Athletic Park last Saturday, losing 3-2 to Victoria London Boxing Club — only this time their sorry secret was exposed.

This time, the Vancouver side showed it just isn't a 90-minute club. Not yet anyway.

So dominant were the hustling Columbians in the first half that they could have been four or five goals up at the interval. Typical of their luck was a great move just before half time when Bobby Cram sent through a fine pass only to see centre-forward Rick Sedar brush the outside of a post with his shot. And they had to be content with a 2-0 half-time lead.

Had they been able to keep up this hustle and bustle for the rest of the game, Columbians would probably have run away with it. But, 15 minutes into the second half, the visitors could barely walk, let alone run! And the Boxers, cleverly making the most of their snappy, short-passing game, romped to victory.

Sitting on the bench with manager Scott just moments after half time, you could tell he was edgy. But he didn't want to believe his boys could lose another close one.

Then Garnet Moen scored.

"Yes, most of the players are from England," says Scott who comes from there himself.

Playing-coach Cram, now 33, once played for West Bromwich Albion in the first division but he finished his career in England in the third division with Colchester before coming to B.C. to play for Vancouver Spartans in the ill-fated Premier League.

Adrian Webster, a 21-year-old striker from Colchester, and 20-year-old Phil Trenter from Ipswich were, with Cram, the pick of the Columbians' crop in Saturday's game. Trenter, who played last in the juvenile league in Delta, was particularly strong on defence and saved one sure goal by clearing from the line.

"This is a young team with an average age of only 22," said Scott. "The players only got together at the beginning of this season and each time out they seem to get a little better."

Then Tom Forrester scored, and suddenly it was 2-2.

Scott was more nervous now, but said he really believed his squad would finish in the top four and make the playoffs.

Then a Victoria forward tripped over a Vancouver defender (who had fallen) and referee Ken Baggott slapped the Columbians with a penalty shot. And Scott jumped to his feet.

"There! That's typical of the way things have been going for us."

It was a cheap penalty, all right, and even the partisan home crowd cheered when goalkeeper John Koostra made a fine save on Brian Robinson's shot.

But Scott could have no complaints about the way the fitter Boxers took command for the rest of the game; or the way George Pakos got the winning goal; or the way his Columbians just faded and faded.

Last month, Columbians gave up a 4-3 decision to Pegasus, the Vancouver club that shares the lead with the Boxers.

That too was a collapse toward the end, with the winning goal coming one minute before the final whistle. And now the Columbians know why.

It's a matter of conditioning and that's Scott's problem and Cram's problem.

They'll be back. The Columbians play the well-conditioned, young Gorge Molsons in Victoria on Saturday, Nov. 17.

That gives them three weks to get in shape. They've got the message. And if they do it, Molsons can expect one of their toughest games of the season.

Derby Blanked By Sunderland

LONDON (Reuter) — Three goals by Vic Halom gave defending champion Sunderland a 3-0 home win over Derby County in their English League Cup soccer second-round replay Wednesday.

Second-division Sunderland inflicted the first defeat suffered by Derby under new manager Dave MacKay, who took over from Brian Clough last week.

Having disposed of Derby, Sunderland now faces another First-Division club, Liverpool, at home in the third round.

In a third-round upset Wednesday, Fourth Division Exeter City toppled Second Division West Bromwich Albion with a 3-1 away victory, with Fred Binney scoring twice in 12 minutes.

Tranmere Rovers, having disposed of mighty Arsenal in the second round, were forced to settle for a 1-1 draw against Wolverhampton Wanderers.

CFB Esquimalt, representing the Pacific Command, edged Baden, West Germany, 3-2 Wednesday to move into first place in the Canadian armed forces soccer championship.

It was Esquimalt's second straight one-goal decision in the six-team, round-robin tournament. Play continues at Naden Field through Saturday.

In other matches Wednesday, Peter Smith's two goals powered CFB Winnipeg, the Prairie Command representative, to a 2-0 victory over Val Cartier, Que., and Trenton, Ont., tied Halifax 3-3.

Joe Yvonne, Bruce Morash and Werner Schawn scored Esquimalt's goals.

Flyers Playing A Spoiling Role

CHEMAINUS — Fuller Lake Flyers have turned out to be the early-season spoilers in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Winless in five previous games until they played Saanich on Monday, the Flyers made it two straight over the Braves Wednesday. Fuller Lake's 8-3 victory marked the third straight setback for Saanich, all coming in the last three days.

Ray Stubbington led Flyers with three goals while Darryl Parrott, Ralph Fraser, Mike Rogerson and Doug Lafleur scored one apiece.

School Basketball: New Rules, More Speed

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

New rules but the same two teams fighting for the title—that's how the coming season shapes up in the Victoria senior high school boys' basketball league.

This year, high schools in B.C. will be playing under international rules. The major change is that teams must shoot within 30 seconds of gaining possession of the ball.

This is expected to speed up play and, as a result, some coaches foresee an increase in the number of fouls. If this turns out to be true, bench strength will be vital.

Many coaches are faced with a problem getting scoreboards containing devices to cover the 30-second rule.

Dale Bate, coach of Mt. Douglas Rams, estimates the scoreboard changeover could cost from $250 to $1,000 per school. With money hard to come by and the start of the league schedule only two months away, some schools may elect to handle the timing with a clock from the scorer's table.

The league will remain at eight teams this season. Parkland, a new senior high school, has an enrolment of fewer than 200 boys and will bypass "AA" competition in favor of provincial playdowns against other "A" schools. The team will play exhibition games, however, against schools in both classes.

A straw vote among the coaches shows Mt. Doug and Oak Bay Bays as the probable one-two finishers, in either order. Belmont Braves are early-line favorites for third place with Vic High Totems, Esquimalt Dockers and Reynolds Roadrunners in a three-team scramble for the fourth and final playoff berth.

Coaches Pick Mt. Douglas And Oak Bay In a Repeat Of Last Year's Fight for First

Here's how each team shapes up:

Oak Bay

Don Horwood, starting his fifth season as coach, has guided the Bays into the B.C. finals every year and last spring swept the city, Island and provincial crowns. However, he's lost MVP Chris Trumpey and Grant Boland, both B.C. all-stars, and all-province honorable mention Brian Sutherland-Brown. Back are David Rinzinger (6-4), a provincial second-team all-star, Evan Jones (6-3), Rob Parris (5-9) and Tim Carlson (5-9). Newcomers include Steve Pescod (6-2) from North Delta, the B.C. junior high school tourney's MVP last year Brian Mann (6-4), Scott Noble (6-1), Larry Dalziel (6-6), Dennis Trumpey (6-1) and Mark Bonsor (6-0).

Mt. Doug

The Rams were second in the league and third on the Island last year. Bate is back for his second term as coach and, although he has lost eight of last season's team, three of his four returnees are starters. Holdovers are guards Rick Jones (6-1) and Doug Mosher (6-1), centre Mike Gains (6-3) and forward Gordon Wood (6-2). Gone are Kevin Worth, a rebounding leader, Bent Hanson and Don Huestis. Top newcomers are Bruce Lubinitch, a 6-3½ centre who was with Mt. View two years ago and North Delta last year, and 6-2 forward John McManaman.

Belmont

Bill Spotwood, who coached the Braves in 1967 and '68, is returning along with Bob Wilson, (6-2) the team's top scorer Brian Foley (5-11), Malcom Moscrop (6-1) and Jim Wallace (6-2). In addition, Braves inherit the entire starting lineup from Island junior high champion Elizabeth Fisher, including guard Rick Reese and forward Ted Cuckovich, both 6-1 and both all-stars in last year's B.C. bantam finals.

Vic High

Ash Valdal heads into his fifth year at the Totem helm but has lost five from last year, including four starters. Gone are top scorer John Hampdon, Steve Rothwell, Doug Irvin, John Lynch and Anni Barbon. Lone returning starter is 5-10 guard George Lomas. Also back are guards Fred Carlson (5-10) and Kerry Short (6-0). Newcomers include centre Richard Griffin and forward Doug Callbeck, both 6-1 from Central Junior High, and 6-3 forward Richard Pyatt from Landsdowne.

Esquimalt

Vic Derman has lost his top player, Phil Simms, as he begins his fourth season as coach of the Dockers. But he has returning starters Bob Vanderford (6-2), Colin Ross (6-1), Brian Townson (5-10) and Ben Shotten (6-0) along with new players Rob Zeltz, a 6-3 centre, Dave Carey, a six-foot forward and Ed Graham, a 5-10 guard.

Mt. View

Hornets were the surprise last year, finishing second on the Island before bowing out in the provincial final. Sig Kuehn, who coached a Prince George team into the B.C. junior high school finals last spring, replaces Wayne Erickson as coach but has only Duane Robinson (6-0) back. Everyone else is gone, including Gary Budd and Kevin Gilbert. New faces include Joe Grewl (6-1) from Colquitz, John Taekema (6-9) who is playing high school ball for the first time and John Young (6-5).

Reynolds

Erickson has moved over from Mt. View to coach the Roadrunners but there are only two returnees, guards Tom Jones (6-2) and Clarence Webster (5-10). Among the graduates are leading scorer Avtair Bains and guard Barry Scroggs. Leading the newcomers are David McMillan, a 5-9 guard from Ocean Falls, and forwards Glen Fincham (6-2), Eric Jones (6-1) and Charlie Hunter (6-0), all up from junior high ranks.

Claremont

Spartans were 2-12 in league play last year but coach Doug Latta has six returning lettermen—Don Tilley (6-0), Paul Davidson (6-2), Bob Lee (5-10), Larry Stansfield (6-3), Eric Bentzon (6-4) and Les Lohr (5-9. Among the missing this year are scoring leader Brian Montgomery, Dave Tremblay, Sandy McHattie and John Alexander. The pick of the new crop includes Gary Gawley (6-4), Grant Westmorland (6-2) and Ken Berry (5-9).

Parkland

Corky Jossul, former star guard with University of Victoria Vikings, is the coach and is arranging an exhibition schedule with such schools as Shawnigan Lake, Port McNeil, Qualicum, Edward Milne in Sooke and several city teams. The Panthers will go after the Island berth in the B.C. "A" schools final at Kelowna in late February. Top prospects are centre Mike Nauss (6-1), forwards Jeremy Guy (6-2) and Rich Williams (6-0) and guards Greg Tredgett (5-8) and Mike Salkus (5-6).

Claremont Eliminated

Mt. Douglas eliminated Claremont from playoff contention in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League by blanking winless Parkland 8-0 Wednesday.

In the only match, Mount View kept its playoff hopes alive by trouncing Belmont 11-1.

The victory moved Mt. Douglas into second place and the final playoff spot, two points behind leading Reynolds and four points ahead of fourth-ranked Claremont with only one match remaining.

Mount View remains two points behind Mt. Douglas and meets Parkland today in the final match of the league schedule for both teams.

If Mt. Douglas and Mount View end up in a tie for the final berth, there will be a sudden-death match on neutral ground Monday.

At Mt. Douglas, Brock Coupar and Glen Oberg each scored twice while single goals were added by Alan Grey, Peter Owen, Brian Bandy and Joe Achadinha.

Mark Cline exploded for six goals to lead host Mount View and boosted his season total to 17. The output moved Cline into second place in the individual scoring race, eight goals behind leading Howie Kirk of Reynolds.

Other Mount View goals were scored by Sam Bender (2), Bob Cool, Brad Clarke and Mike Wallace while Don Hanson averted a shutout for Belmont.

Swim Finals Set Tonight

Nine schools are competing in the annual Greater Victoria high school swim meet that ends tonight at Crystal Pool.

Defending champion Oak Bay, Mt. Douglas, Victoria, Esquimalt, Reynolds, Mount View, Claremont, Belmont and a boys' team from St. Michael's University School are competing in the meet, which started this morning and winds up with finals beginning at 6 p.m.

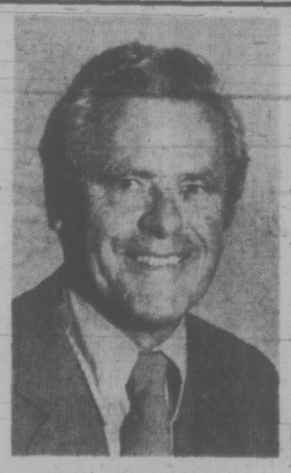

The Vancouver Island meet is scheduled for Nov. 10.

UBC Women Score Win

VANCOUVER — Jane Parker fired 16 points Wednesday to lead University of British Columbia Jayvees to a 52-41 victory over Vancouver in an Inter-City Senior "A" Women's Basketball League game.

Jane Creelman and Brenda Simpson added 10 points each to the UBC total while Heather Mitten had 12 points for Vancouver, which led 22-20 at half time.

QUESTION: "In general, which of the brands you are familiar with is the highest quality color TV set?"
ANSWERS: Zenith 33%; Brand A 10%; Brand B 5%; Brand G 5%; Brand H 5%; Brand F 3%; Brand C 3%; Brand I 3%; Brand D 2%; Brand E 2%; Other Brands 8%; More than one/all same 9%; Don't know 12%

How the survey was made.
One of the largest research firms in Canada conducted this study of independent service technicians' attitudes toward brands of color television. Telephone interviews were conducted with TV service technicians themselves during January 1973, in major cities from coast to coast. To eliminate the factor of loyalty to a single brand, the study included only shops which serviced more than one brand of TV. Survey details are available on request. Steelers Again Pass Chance to Get Unitas

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers, who didn't want John Unitas in 1955, say they still don't want him.

San Diego Chargers, who bought Unitas from Baltimore Colts for $150,000 this year and signed him to a two-year contract reported at $250,000 a season, offered the 40-year-old quarterback to the Steelers this week.

The Steelers, who originally drafted Unitas but released him before the season, replied, "we're not interested."

Vice-President Dan Rooney said Wednesday that coach Chuck Noll, a former assistant at Baltimore, turned down a deal for Unitas even though starter Terry Bradshaw is sidelined by a shoulder injury and backup Terry Hanratty has bruised ribs.

Since the National Football League trading deadline has expired, players can change clubs only by waivers, in which teams can enter a claim in reverse order of last year's finish. The new team assumes the player's current salary.

However, San Diego wants more than the $100 waiver price for the NFL's all-time leading passer.

Unitas started San Diego's first four games but was benched midway through a 38-21 loss Oct. 7 to Pittsburgh and hasn't played since. Coach Harland Svare is using rookie Dan Fouts and indicated this week he might turn to third-year man Wayne Clark before trying Unitas again.

Coach Arrested

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Bob Lemieux, general manager and coach of Virginia Wings of the American Hockey League, was arrested Wednesday night following a brawl with game officials and policemen, authorities said.

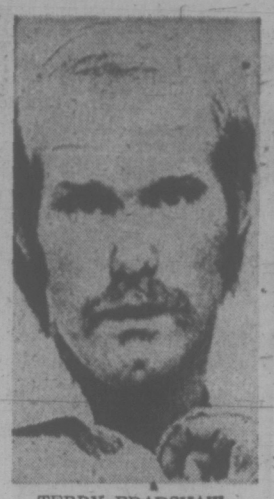

Lemieux was charged with one count each of disorderly conduct and assaulting a police officer. He was released on $350 bond.

The coach was ejected from the game by officials during the last minute of the first period. The Wings were playing Providence.

Lemieux had heatedly contested what he considered a failure by officials to call a penalty on Providence for rough play. When the coach argued with game officials, he was ejected.

There was confusion, police said, and as the coach grappled with officials, three Norfolk policemen arrived.

At least three policemen were struck during the fight, authorities said.

FORMER BOXER DIES

TORONTO (CP) — Vince Glionna, who represented Canada in boxing at the 1928 Olympics, died in hospital Wednesday at the age of 69.

Canada Will Send Juniors

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canada's future in the world amateur hockey championship "lies at the junior level," says Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

He said in an interview Wednesday a world championship that would involve Canadian participation for the first time since 1970 is being planned for no later than 1975.

"We'll always be faced with the problem of collecting our best players for a world championship, but I'm certain we'll have a nationall team . . . with the best players being drawn from the three major junior leagues in Canada."

He said establishment of a national team at the junior level would not be a year-round thing, but something "we might put together with players from the three leagues working out at one base for two weeks or so before they go overseas."

He was referring to the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League and the Western Canada Hockey League.

Canada withdrew from world play in 1972 when the International Ice Hockey Federation refused sanction of a request for the use of nine professionals with the national team.

Peterborough Petes of the OHA Junior A will play a five-game exhibition series Dec. 27 to Jan. 6 in Leningrad against teams from Russia, Czechoslovakia, the United States, Finland and Sweden.

Regina Pats of the WCHL will compete Dec. 19 to Jan. 4 in Sweden and senior clubs from St. Boniface, Man., and Orillia, Ont., also will take part in Swedish tournaments next month.

Rain-Making Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Environment Minister Jack Davis opposed Wednesday a plan by Seattle City Light to seed rain clouds near the Skagit Valley, on the British Columbia lower mainland, which could increase precipitation on both sides of the border.

The minister said a protest against the plan has been lodged with the United States government.

"There is no way Canada can sit idly by and see such a weather project that would affect the Skagit Valley," he said.

"There can be no weather modification activity on either side of the boundary without an international agreement."

Davis said preliminary talks with U.S. officials on weather modification already have begun, with attention to future plans for cloud seeding over the Great Lakes.

He said an agreement is "some distance away."

The proposal by Seattle City Light involves the use of 10 ground generators powered by propane and burning silver iodine. The silver iodine particles are the ingredient that causes increased rainfall — when and if the process works — which in turn could increase electric generation capacity at the Ross Dam to alleviate Seattle's power shortage.

Ross Dam is 30 miles south of the border, but the drainage area from the Skagit River, and the target of rain-making attempts, extends north into Canada.

The protest by Davis to U.S. authorities will probably delay and seeding. Informal hearings are scheduled in Washington State today and Friday, with formal hearings, required by state law, to be held Nov. 12-14.

Teamster Bid Studied

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Brotherhood of Teamsters applied for reaffiliation with the Canadian Labor Congress Wednesday as part of a move towards merging with the International United Brewery Workers.

Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian international vice-president of the Teamsters, said the union's international executive board voted unanimously in Miami, Fla., to rejoin the CLC. The Teamsters were expelled from the CLC in 1960 in a conflict involving truck drivers for CP Rail.

Senator Lawson, speaking in a telephone interview from Miami after the board meeting, said he hopes the CLC executive council can consider the application at a Dec. 11 meeting.

He said he and two other international vice - presidents will attend a Brewery Workers' international convention in Cincinnati Monday where a final version of a merger agreement will be put to delegates.

Senator Lawson said the bid to reaffiliate with the CLC has been timed to promote the merger of the two-million-member Teamsters, International with the 45,000-member Brewery Workers union.

The Teamsters have about 70,000 Canadian members and the Brewery Workers about 12,000.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Drug cases continue to dominate proceedings in Victoria provincial court.

Ten cases came before the court Wednesday; three were disposed of by fine or jail sentence and adjournments were granted in the other cases.

Ronald Arthur Glass, 35, of 2219 Shakespeare, was sentenced to 60 days in jail when he was found guilty by Judge Edmond St. Jorre of possessing marijuana.

Crown said an RCMP drug officer entered Glass's bedroom the evening of July 30 just as the accused was preparing to take some speed.

The officer found a plastic bag containing marijuana in a desk drawer as well as a glass syringe containing speed. The accused admitted both were his.

Two men received $75 fines each when they pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler to possession of marijuana.

Roy Antony Conibear, 21, of No. 9, 777 Blanshard, and Donald Robert Goodman, 22, of 540 Cecilia, were charged Oct. 24 when police found them with a small amount of the drug in a parking lot in the 700 block Courtney.

★ ★ ★

Thomas Allen Jamieson, 23, of 1418 Hillside, was fined $200 and placed on one year's probation when he appeared before Judge St. Jorre for sentencing on a charge of theft under $200.

Jamieson pleaded guilty Oct. 19 to taking some traffic ticket books and notices from a police car parked in front of the City Hall on Oct. 12.

★ ★ ★

Two Montreal girls who arrived in Victoria a month ago to look for jobs pleaded guilty to shoplifting goods from The Bay Tuesday afternoon.

Ostler remanded Danielle Marie Barbeau and Denise Turcotte to Nov. 14 for a presentence report.

Barbeau admitted taking several items including a hairdrier, dressing gown, purse, wallet and change purse, valued at $84; Turcotte admitted stealing a hairdrier and a wallet valued at $40.

"This seems to be a case for a probation officer's report," Ostler said. "Not only is this shoplifting but extraordinarily greedy shoplifting."

★ ★ ★

Ostler committed Philip Kenneth Montgomery, 17, of 972 Kentwood, to trial in county court for attempted breaking and entering.

★ ★ ★

William Smith Cruickshank, 61, of 2827 Colquitz, was fined $350 for impaired driving and $200 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. He pleaded guilty to both charges laid after police investigated a hit and run in the 600-block Gorge Tuesday evening.

Israeli Tourism Takes a Dive

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Middle East war has put Israel's largest foreign currency earner on the casualty list.

Tourist traffic to the Jewish state dropped by almost 75 per cent in the first 20 days of October, tourism ministry officials said.

Hellyer Attacks Grit 'Secrecy'

OTTAWA (FP) — An angry Paul Hellyer who left the Liberal cabinet and party to cross the floor and sit with the official opposition, Wednesday protested vehemently in the Commons that there was "too much secrecy" surrounding the administration.

The usually quiet-spoken member for Trinity became angry when motions put on the order paper for the production of papers were rejected by the government.

The administration refused to table documents that the opposition had asked be produced in the House.

Hellyer said the government in refusing to table information of the type requested was establishing a new practice and departing from time-honored precedents.

"Historically it has been the practice that public documents always would be tabled in response to an order of the kind introduced by the opposition. It has been the practice for many years that applications from private companies and persons for assistance of the kind set out in the order should be made public.

"These are matters of public record and it is only internal documents between ministers and civil servants acting within the departments that are considered privileged. That has been the rule for decades.

"Now a new practice is being established whereby applications from persons and organizations outside government and letters in support of these applications are denied to members of the House," he said.

His complaint was cut off short by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

But Hellyer was not to be stopped. He jumped to his feet again, after being called to order and renewed his verbal protest.

The Speaker pointed ut that the motion was transferred for debate but Hellyer was now launching the debate.

Talk Issue In Quebec Court: PM

OTTAWA (FP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday that Ottawa is willing to consider re-opening constitutional talks with the provinces if and when Quebec indicates that it is prepared to adopt a more compatible position.

The overwhelming victory of Premier Robert Bourassa at the polls Monday has led to speculation that Quebec's new government might want to resume negotiations on the constitution.

CHICKEN OR EGG ISSUE

OTTAWA (FP) — Like the old riddle: Which came first the chicken or the egg, the Commons had an economic riddle placed before it Wednesday, Opposition financial critics put the question to Finance Minister John Turner:

Which came first: Inflation or the larger work force?

James Gillies (PC — Don Valley) opened up the exchange in the House with the comment that he was intrigued by Turner's suggestion, made recently in a speech, that the increase in unemployment was in large measure caused by the high level of economic activity in the country.

"Does this mean that the government is taking the position that the economy should be slowed down in order to reduce the rate of unemployment and inflation?" he enquired.

"No," replied Turner.

Then why, Gillies wanted to know, is the government following a policy of slowing down the economy as indicated by the rate of decline in the real domestic product.

Turner patiently explained that during the last quarter of 1972 and the first quarter of 1973 the economy has expanded at an unsustainable rate of about 12 per cent.

He added that it was realized that the economy would have to moderate in its expansion and it is now "on target" at about seven per cent of the real growth for 1973. He had forecast in his budget last February a growth rate of seven per cent.

Gillies persisted. He wanted to know if the finance department is taking the position that slowing down the rate of growth of the economy is essential to moderate the rate of inflation.

Turner said that the government wanted to take whatever heat exists in the economy and moderate it in a fashion that would be sufficient to sustain long-term growth without risk of recession. He said this was, in his view, a healthy way to run the economy.

Door Opened for Pay, Pension

OTTAWA (CP) — Retired MPs and senators may be one step closer to the day when they can collect full pensions while holding other federal government jobs following a vote today by the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee.

The committee appeared favorably disposed to the move, proposed by Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) Wednesday. But it was unable to vote because it lacked a quorum.

Lambert's motion would remove current restrictions that prevent MPs, senators, and retired RCMP or armed forces officers from collecting pensions if they take positions with the federal government.

As it now is, he told the committee, the system encourages a "terrible waste of good potential."

An MP, who can retire on a pension after six years in office, can retain his pension if he takes another job, for instance, with a provincial government.

But the pension ceases if he takes a federal position, either with the civil service or an appointment, and doesn't begin again until he quits.

Gilles Caouette (SC—Charlevoix) said he agrees that any injustice should be corrected, but he objected mildly for what he called political reasons.

Lambert's proposal, he said, "may have repercussions." The law was probably designed originally to make sure a man couldn't have "a pension and a salary at the same time."

HANSARD 'CHANGED'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Erik Nielsen (Yukon) complained Wednesday that Solicitor-General Warren Allmand "or his minions" deliberately altered the official Commons record to change the meaning of a statement.

Allmand said he had not seen the proofs of the Hansard record but if any changes were "out of order," he would agree to corrections if Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux rules they are necessary.

Bone of contention was a statement on the British Columbia penitentiary by Allmand, saying the impending resignation of the penitentiary director, S. R. Graves, and "other improvements" was part of a corrections system review.

It is routine to provide MPs with the opportunity to correct grammatical and other minor errors in their remarks. Changes of substance are banned unless it is a Hansard error.

In the final version of Hansard, the statement said the penitentiary director is about to retire and that a successor will be named.

The part about "improvement" was amended to describe other changes not linked with the director.

BOLT SHAKES POLE SITTERS

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — After 13 days atop a 30-foot pole, 23-year-old Ross Munroe was struck by lightning. He escaped with only a burned arm, but 21-year-old Libby Radcliffe, sitting on another pole 30 feet away, was so frightened by the storm she tripped and broke a toe. Both were pole-sitting to raise money for charity.

Hemorrhoids can itch, burn, swell and hurt something awful.

That's why you'll welcome New Anusol Plus.

If you've ever really suffered from hemorrhoids, you know the kind of relief you'd like to be getting from the medication that you use.

Fast pain relief, for one thing. New Anusol Plus relieves your hemorrhoid pain almost as soon as you apply it.

And Anusol Plus numbs the maddening itch that so often comes with hemorrhoids.

For that burning sensation, it contains a soothing, cooling emollient.

There's even a gentle decongestant that works to reduce the swelling and thus the inflammation.

And while New Anusol Plus works quickly to ease your discomfort, two soothing antiseptic agents are acting to curb infection—thus giving your hemorrhoids a better chance to heal.

One other thing. Since treating your hemorrhoids can sometimes be painful in itself, new Anusol Plus now comes in a silky-smooth cream. Even when spread on inflamed and tender areas, it goes on very easily. And, since the relief it gives lasts for hours, you don't have to apply it so often.

How do we know what you look for in a hemorrhoid medication? Because we've taken the time to find out the answers from hundreds of hemorrhoid sufferers just like you.

For relief from your hemorrhoid symptoms, use new Anusol Plus, in cream or suppository form.

Sold at pharmacies only, it's a hemorrhoid medication that does what you want it to do.

RE-8250C

Panasonic shows you how to be a stereo nut without cracking up over the cost.

A good deal of stereo for your money. That's a promise. Here's the proof.

Every Panasonic stereo system comes complete. With specially matched speakers. With the latest developments in circuitry. With everything you need right now. And with a future. In case your appetite for stereo is bigger than your pocketbook.

Where you start depends on what you need. Maybe it's a good-looking FM/AM/FM Stereo that plays 8-track cartridges. The Bramley (model RE-8250C) does that. And more. It takes two 8-track cartridges and plays them automatically, one after another, for hours of uninterrupted music. Two air-suspension speakers are included in the price. And later on, you can add an optional 4-speed record changer.

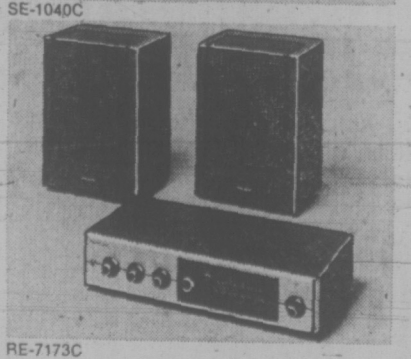

The Montagne (model SE-4070C) is a complete stereo home entertainment system in itself. FM/AM/FM Stereo radio. Full size built-in 4-speed record changer. 8-track tape recorder. And if you feel the urge, right now or later, you can add two speakers to the two already there, and enjoy the presence of 4-channel Quadruplex sound from conventional 2-channel sources. Your stereo records have never sounded so good.

SE-4070C

SE-1040C

RE-7173C

If you want a complete entertainment system that is also a space saver, the Brewton (model SE-1040C) is for you. Built-in cassette tape recorder. Panasonic 3-speed record changer. FM/AM/FM Stereo, too. With two speakers included it's a lot of stereo. You'll save space without sacrificing good sound.

A sound start to any stereo system is a good FM/AM/FM Stereo radio. That's The Northington (model RE-7173C). Two speakers are included, and you can go on from there. By adding a record changer, an 8-track or cassette deck, even stereo headphones.

What you see here isn't nearly all Panasonic has to offer. So, whether you want a system to start with, or a system that gives you everything from the start, talk to your Panasonic dealer.

NDP Urges Private Pension Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat spokesman said in the Commons Wednesday that private pension plans should be subject to greater government regulation and control to ensure increased benefits.

Two New Democrats who spoke during the third day of debate on Canada Pension Plan amendments also suggested that perhaps private enterprise plans no longer are needed and the government could provide better plans.

The Canada Pension Plan changes, which have been accepted by all parties in the Commons, would remove a two-per-cent limit on annual increases in pensions and tie benefits to the rising consumer price index.

They also would raise the earnings ceiling upon which annual contributions are based, therefore increasing contributions.

The bill was given second reading and referred to the Commons welfare committee for detailed study.

Private plans generally lack the portability required by pension programs today, David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) argued.

"We are living in an age when there is great mobility," he said. People moved more often, were laid off or changed jobs more frequently.

While the federal government and four provinces have minimum standards for private plans, he noted six provinces do not.

Employers should be made to match the contributions made by the employees in private plans, Orlikow said. Some plans, such as those of the railways, make workers pay three to four times as much as the employer, he added.

Under the Canada Pension Plan, employers and employees each make equal contributions into the plan, while self-employed persons pay both portions.

Orlikow called for provincial legislation to provide for a cost-of-living factor that matches price index changes.

If these things were done, private pensions, the old-age pension and supplement and the Canada Pension Plan together would give the retired a decent living standard.

Orlikow said greater regulation would be distasteful to private pension plan operators because "their essential purpose is to make profit."

"We may find, as we have found in medicare, that the state can do a better job in pensions than the private sector."

Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West), speaking before Orlikow, said insurance companies could be developed into a powerful social and economical force for the government.

The Night Viet Cong Came

KIM SON, South Vietnam (WP) — Nguyen Van Tai, a local militiaman, sat on his haunches under a shady tree puffing his water pipe and telling how it was last week when the Communist soldiers came in the night.

The occasional muffled crump of an exploding artillery shell floated across the morning stillness over an expanse of sun-splashed Mekong Delta rice paddy.

The chunky, bare-chested militiaman told of a big battle a week ago — a battle that cost about 50 lives on each side and that government spokesmen in Saigon are calling perhaps the biggest and bloodiest since the January ceasefire.

The story of the battle here, to the extent that it can be discovered, is in many ways the story of Vietnam today: a strange, murky world of war that few observers are allowed to see and between armies that are technically at peace.

Who starts these fights? How do the battles go? Who wins?

These are questions that are not answered any more, but Tai can point his stubby finger across the wet paddies here — only 40 miles southwest of Saigon — and tell you that thousands of troops from both sides are manoeuvring out there a mile away, that the villagers are so frightened that they huddle inside their huts from 6 p.m. onwards, and that the freshly dead bodies of soldiers are floating down the Mekong River only 200 yards away.

As Tai told it, on the night of Oct. 25 Communist infantrymen crept up on an isolated local militia post — one like Tai's own mud and sandbag fort across the road — and overran it, wiping out most of the defenders; there were, he said, 16 dead militiamen.

"Then the government troops moved in and attacked the Vietcong on the 26th," Tai said. "Big battle. The Arvn (army of the republic of Vietnam) used one recon plane, two choppers and five fighter bombers."

Tai said the government at first used propeller driven A-1 Skyraiders, but these were driven off by fierce anti-aircraft fire and then jets were brought in.

Eventually, he said, three battalions consisting of 1,200 government troops managed to root out the Communists dug in around the outpost and to recapture it.

As Tai talked, old women and children dressed in dirty white shirts, black trousers and conical hats gathered around and giggled at a reporter's questions.

They confirmed the essential details of Tai's story.

"Sailors on the Mekong still see bodies floating down the river," said one woman, Nguyen Thi Hai. "The Vietcong take them in canoes and then throw then in."

The chugging noise of motor boats on the swirling, muddy river drifted across the village.

A young man, Tran Van Xuan, said, "the people don't dare to go out at night around here." Why not? Because we are afriad of shooting from the government outposts."

Xuan said, "the Vietcong often come into the village at night to hang up their flags, but they don't annoy the people or go into their houses."

Nguyen Van Than, Tai's commander, wandered along the narrow dirt road, his black, American-supplied M-16 rifle slung upside down over his shoulder.

"The Vietcong anti-aircraft guns were all over the place," he said. "They forced away the government helicopters."

Asked why his men did not go to the aid of the beseiged outpost on Oct. 25, Than said, "we have only 10 men and my main duty is to preserve my own outpost. We rarely go out on patrols."

Men like Tai and Than are strictly local soldiers — as distinct from the more highly trained regular army troops like those of the seventh and ninth divisions that the villagers said were at that moment sweeping the paddies a mile to the north.

Brezhnev Weeps

MOSCOW (AP) — Marshal Semyon Budenny, noted Soviet cavalry commander, was buried Tuesday beside the Kremlin wall. He died Friday at the age of 90. Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev dabbed his eyes with a handkerchief as the body of the military hero was lowered into its grave.

HYBRID CAR INVENTED

MIDDLEBURY, Conn. (UPI) — A Cheshire, Conn., man who has designed a car powered by both gasoline and electricity will receive the first set of licence plates for his experimental vehicle Friday.

E. Robert Horwinski will be presented with the plates marked "Exper I" by motor vehicles commissioner Edward Kozlowski at an air and water quality symposium.

Horwinski built his hybrid car using a convertor from a standard 1973 Chevelle chassis. It will be on exhibit at the University research Centre symposium.

The car's speed and acceleration are equivalent to the conventional Chevelle, and standard automotive batteries for the car are charged overnight.

After about 25 miles, the gasoline engine starts automatically and runs the car through the convertor with the excess power recharging the batteries.

Where power greater than the engine can supply is required, the batteries are called on to supply additional power.

When operated electrically, the car has zero pollutants. On longer trips when operated as a hybrid, its pollutants are reduced considerably compared to conventional vehicles.

A built-in computer controls the engine operation.

The symposium is sponsored by the Institute of Environmental Sciences, with the co-operation of the Environmental Protection Research Institute.

Parent's Guide to Pre-School Toys

Check this list of tested and proven toys for girls and boys from infancy to the age of 6. Find out how they can help children develop vocabulary, motor skills, creativity and balanced play activity.

SAFETY FIRST

Before you allow your child to play with anything — whether it's a manufactured toy or a simple household object — ask yourself these basic questions:

"Does this have any sharp edges? Is it sturdy enough to stand up to a good pounding? Is it made of any toxic material?"

All Mattel® toys are designed with these and many other safety factors in mind, and all our toys are repeatedly tested for safety.

But remember that an active, alert pre-schooler will seek out and play with almost any object within reach. So please keep the above three basic safety questions in mind.

SUITABILITY

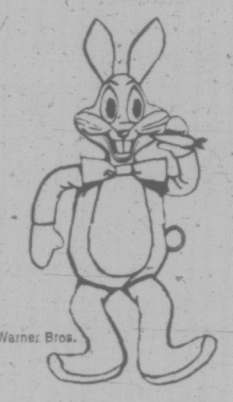

Your child is a unique person with special interests and aptitudes which may alter rapidly. Don't worry if he or she becomes fascinated with a particular toy to the exclusion of others you may find more fascinating or believe are more instructive. Whether a toy is simple or relatively complex is no true measure of the child's intelligence.

And remember — there is a thin line between stimulating your child's imagination and frustrating it. So don't force toys on him which may be too advanced for him at the moment.

ALPHABET PHONE™

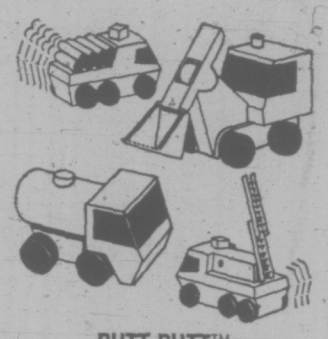

You may be amazed how quickly your child learns about the alphabet and spelling skills from playing with this educational toy. The six double sided records are easy to pop in and out of the phone and are durable enough to play again and again. Nice Neighbors Phone is also available to help your child learn about the world and people about him. Batteries not included.

TALKING BUGS BUNNY

This cuddly favourite says "What's up, Doc?" and 7 other phrases when your child pulls Bugs' sturdy string. 11" tall. A classic for all pre-schoolers. No batteries needed.

PUTT-PUTT™

Almost all pre-schoolers are fascinated by these simple and extraordinary durable little hardwood vehicles. Each has movable parts and rolling wheels. Some are powered by a simple and long-lasting motor that takes just a twist of the wrist to wind up. The Push 'n Play™ models have no motor and are designed for younger children.

SEE 'N SAY® TALKING/LEARNING TOYS

The Count with Colors™ See 'n Say® helps your pre-schooler learn about colours and numbers. Simple pull ring operation. Other themes available: "The Farmer Says", "The Bee Says" (alphabet), and "Mother Goose Says" (nursery rhymes). Handy carry case, sturdy styrene construction. No batteries needed.

THE FOUR MAIN KINDS OF PLAY

Just as every child needs a balanced diet to build a healthy body, every child needs well-balanced play equipment to contribute to his all-round development. Every child should have toys which satisfy his interests in:

1. Active physical play — push-and-pull toys, wheel toys, balls, sports and gym equipment.
2. Constructive, creative play — blocks, construction toys, drawing and painting equipment.
3. Dramatic play — dolls, stuffed animals, small wheeled toys, airplanes, dress-up costumes.
4. Social play — By sharing all the above play activities with other children, your child learns how to get along with others.

TUFF STUFF™ APPLIANCES AND TOOLS

Your child pulls the cord, pushes the button, and — presto! — hours of pretend playing with these safety-tested toys. A mixer and sewing machine for little girls and a play saw and drill for boys. They sound like the real thing. All are safe, amazingly durable (5 year guarantee), and specially stimulating for older pre-schoolers. No batteries needed.

JACK-IN-THE-MUSIC BOXES

Favourite children's characters jump out of their colourful music boxes to provide hours of entertainment. Available with a Clown, Snoopy or Mother Goose. No batteries needed.

TODDLERS — 18 MONTHS TO 3 YEARS

Toddlers love playing with simple musical instruments, from tambourines to toy pianos, and older members of this age group can enjoy simple phonographs and pull-the-string talking toys. Clay to poke and pat fills out the creative urge to make things. Low tricycles, trucks and animals that can be straddled, and inflatable toys of all sizes, satisfy the need for physical play.

TUFF STUFF™ 5 YEAR GUARANTEE

All toys made of Mattel's® unique Tuff Stuff™ are washable, colourfast, weather resistant and so tough that they are guaranteed for five full years.

PUTT-PUTT™ CONSTRUCTION YARD

A happy stimulus to almost unlimited play situations — combines coordination with imaginative play. Your child gets a hardwood motor truck, flatbed trailer, movable fork lift, 4 sections of track, 2 pallets, 3 wood blocks, a warehouse, crane tower and crane, conveyor belt and 2 gates. No batteries needed.

MUSICAL GE-TARS™

A simple crank operates the Ge-Tar™ and the strings are there for strumming. Choose from Cowboy, Mother Goose or Snoopy. No battery needed.

OLDER TODDLERS— 3 to 6

At this stage, children are fascinated by acting out grown-up roles, such as firemen, policemen, doctors, nurses, and cowboys. Costumes and props help them in this play. Setting up a play store, or food stand with play money, telephone, cash register and other items is also a great source of fun — and learning.

TUFF STUFF™ ALPHA TRUCK™

A ride-on truck that is washable, colourfast, rust proof and made of incredibly sturdy Tuff Stuff™. Comes with thirty alphabet blocks that stack in racks to spell words both down and across. This toy is designed to develop motor, adaptive, and spelling skills. Also, it's fun! Both truck and blocks can handle the toughest play. (5 year guarantee).

Hobgoblin Time Again . . .

—John McKay photos

TAKE A COUPLE of clowns, one pirate and the lone ranger himself and what have you got? The ingredients for a Halloween costume party at Oak Bay Firehall. The youngster on the far left is unidentified, but those on the right are, beneath those guises, Sara Nicholson, 9, Andrew Morrison, 8, and Cathy Higgins, 9. Tiny Trick n' Treater in the centre, John Skipp, 3, receives a goodie from Mrs. Sandra Pilon, 1345 Haultain. Youngsters in all shapes, sizes and appearances crystallized in the chill night air for an eve of excitement and gay abandon . . . and a sweet-sated palate.

. . . BUT MORE TREATS THAN NASTY TRICKS

There was more flare than flair to this year's Halloween as only the Pacific Rescue Centre had a busy night with reports of red flares from all over Victoria, Gulf Islands and Greater Vancouver area.

Otherwise it was a quiet night with few incidents and no reports of serious vandalism.

A spokesman for the rescue centre said they received so many calls of flares overnight they stopped keeping count.

Both Victoria fire and police departments said they had a quiet night with only one minor distrubance in Vic West where some fire hydrants were opened.

Saanich was quiet with a few reports of egg throwing and minor vandalism, police said. Some street signs were uprooted and a police car stoned at Cordova Bay though damage was negligible.

There was one report of a person parcelling leaves, stones and dead grass and giving them to trick or treaters in Saanich. However nothing more serious, such as razor blades in apples, was reported.

Bonfires throughout the greater Victoria area were well attended. Police said keeping Halloween quiet and orderly was in large measure due to the number of community activities that were held throughout the area.

In Oak Bay police said there were "a few petty pranks", some reports of firecrackers and a couple of broken windows. All in all there were only three calls of complaint, a spokesman said.

"That's not much when you think four years ago we would have got 30 or 40," he said.

Colwood police described the night as "really quiet" with nothing happening after 10 p.m.

Sooke and Sidney RCMP detachments said halloween was "extremely quiet" in their areas too.

Esquimalt was without incident also, a police spokesman said. "The worst thing that happened was someone stole a youngster's candy," he said.

GOV'T SPENDING SQUEEZE

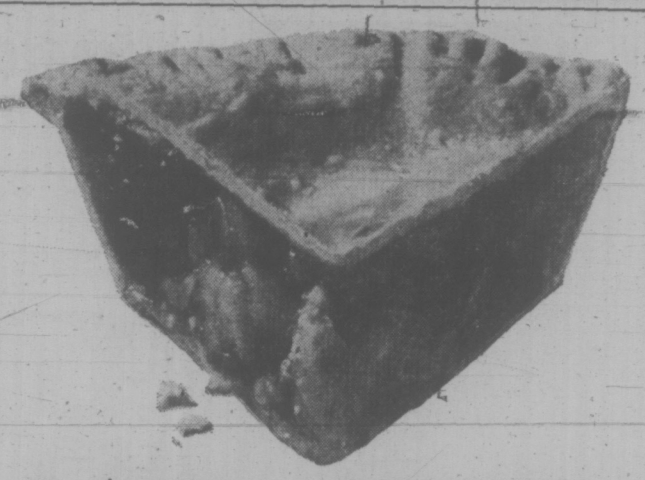

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury board president C. M. Drury said Wednesday government program spending will be constrained in the coming fiscal year because of the added costs of social welfare benefits.

Department requests for program financing will be judged strictly, he said. He would not elaborate.

Department budgets now are before a cabinet committee for consideration and possible revision.

The benefits in the new family allowances program will cost about $1.3 billion in 1974 after tax recoveries of $350 million. The toal cost is $840 million more than the old program.

The family allowances program will increase monthly payments to $20 a child from the present rate of $12.

If We Are What We Eat—We're Sunk

By COLMAN McCARTHY

MIAMI BEACH (WP) — There you are, sir," purred the sex kitten called Miss Enzymes. "Try a taste of simulated pepperoni."

"Try what?" I asked.

"Pepperoni," she said. "Fake pepperini. We make it in links and you slice them up, then drop them on pizzas." Miss Enzymes, wearing her title in a beauty-contest banner down her front, shoved a tray of phony pepperoni under my nose, urging me to take a wedge of it. I declined.

But I was one of the few who could resist this latest concoction from the food chemists at Miles Laboratories Inc. The fake pepperoni was one of 281 exhibit booths set up by 182 companies gathered for the recent 33rd annual convention of the institute of food technologists.

Crammed onto the floor of Miami beach's convention centre — the scene of the polical conventions in 1972, another spectacle of artificiality — the exhibits were not open to the public. The consumer must wait for the doctored foods to show up on his supermarket shelf. But at their convention some 7,000 food technologist spread it out on the shelf in one happy bazaar of clevernesss.

No Joke

Such a food convention may sound like a joke, but for the chemists, salesmen, advertisers and others scrambling for a share of a multibillion dollar market, the only humor is in the other guy's flop. According to the industry, snack foods alone accounted for $3.4 billion in 1971, and the projection is for a 6 per cent annual growth rate.

The shopper in the supermarket aisle sees the newest product — such as Pringles, the reconstituted, saddle-shape potato chip that comes in a tube for an expensive price — but the competition to reach, and then stay in, the aisle is fierce.

In 1969, 9,450 items were introduced into supermarkets, but less than 20 per cent fulfilled the sales goals of their producers.

All this is happening whtn warnings about worthless food continue to spread, from the nation's 100,000 dentists who have to yank the teeth made rotten from sugared foods to as mild an observer as Jean Mayer: "Many Americans see the extensive use of food additives as raising not only profound h ealth and economic implications, but also general questions about the very nature of our civilization."

Down the aisle from what Miles was offering civilzation in the form of simulated pepperoni, a candy company was passing out its chocolate bars. They looked real, but the jolly salesman insisted they weren't. He nodded to a sign behind him: "We've just invented a great new flavor: counterfeit chocolate."

"Is counterfeit what you actually call it?" I asked.

Fake Chocolate

He laughed. "You bet. Counterfeit chocolate is no easy invention. Of course, we don't label it that way for interstate shipment. For that, it's imitation chocolate. But around here, where we know each other, we use counterfeit."

At a nearby booth, Ungerer and Co., a New York flavor maker, said its products "add more tang, tingle, zip, zap, pep, pop, flavor, savor, gusto, smack relish and yum to anything you make to eat. Ungerer's company slogan is, "We sell it like it is."

Across the way another firm tempted people with garlic-flavored almonds. Artificial meat, chicken or ham was available from one merchant, conveniently located near a maker of spray-dried flavor drink to wash it down. Hansen's Laboratory, which says it "won a gold medal for developing the first soluble annato colorant at the Philadelphia world's fair in 1876" was still at it, this time with color extracted from red beets.

Raisins Real

At some booths the exhibitor didn't try to stuff you; he grabbed your chest to pin on a button. One salesman came at me with a large "Create A Food Now" button. Another handed out golf tees, and still another handed out golf tees, and still another offered chemicalized soap bars.

Many of the wives of the conventioneers roamed the aisles cramming their shopping bags with the free samples. One of the few exhibitors that could not boast a fake food but came in with the true article was the Sun Maid Raisin Growers; on inquiry though, an official said that the company had planned on showing its new line of raisins with confectionary coating, but someone at headquarters erred and shipped the display to Minneapolis. That was the scene of last year's convention.

In their efforts to prove the superiority of their chemicals, many companies wage war games at nature. The Durkee Co. says it offers "technology that tops nature." The Givaudan Corp., makers of imitation beef, chicken and lobster flavors, makes "flavors that nature envies." Glidden Organics — a bloody mary mix using new tomato oil — comes on saying "Our nature is to improve on nature." Norda "Takes Nature Further."

Second Creation

It is almost as though these companies were announcing themselves as neo-naturalists, that The Second Creation has come and that in the new Garden of Eden stands a tree from which the almighty chemist hang the temptation of a fake apple.

In candor similar to the way these fathers of technology talk of besting mother nature, they are also candid about the fiscal advantages of food engineering. "Ask Durkee's technologists how you can top nature's secrets — profitably." Stein, Hall and Co., which gives us freeze-thaw stable tapioca starch, Tastefree 272 and Tastefree 4142, says: "To pile up more sales, look into food modified tapioca for flavor encapsulation." An extract firm, Virginia Dare, passed out buttons punning on itself, "Dare to Do It. — "If you don't mind getting the business (the profit business, that is)." Parentheses theirs.

Aside from chemists making progress and making money, the convention also revealed several new twists to the language: Nutranomics, dewatering, texturization, technicon, functionality, this is supplementary to the in-house language created by companies to convince the consumer there really is a difference between their products and the competitors; hence, Nestle Vee-Kreme, Cheezo Nuggets, Jalapeno Pepper flavor, Golden Roast Sesame and Seakrunch, new improved Auxotab, Captain Jimmy's Cosmic Color Poppers, Temptein Pepperoni, Likwifier, Bloiron.

With this kind of genius on the loose, and profits offering no true satisfaction to the hearts of scientists, the convention began fittingly with an awards ceremony. In a large auditorium off the convention floor this year's food technology industrial achievement award went to Armour Co. for its work in inventing the Tenderometer.

This device, strapped over the shoulder like a golf bag and operated by hand, measures the natural tenderness of beef by reporting on an electronic readout meter the resistance to penetration of a pronged punch into the rib eye of a meat slab.

The Tenderometer, however, won't be found in the supermarket meat section for consumer use. It's for the Armour people. They will punch the meat and tell us, via labelling, whether it passed or flunked the tenderometer. Actually, we'll only know if it passed.

Little Known

After the awards ceremony I pushed through the crowd of well-wishers surrounding the Armour man to ask him the fate of meat that scores low on his tenderometer. "We either age it or make it into hamburger," he said.

This marked the second year the industrial achievement award went to a gizmo, not a fake food. In 1972, WUR-PEEL took honors, a dry caustic peeling process for fruits and vegetables.

The public seldom hears of these inventions — even though they are for our benefit, says the IFT — but we know about the 1970 prize winner: Cool Whip. General Foods' laboratory whipped cream has become a profitable item among artificial dairy products that combine sugar, water and other chemicals.

With four days of convening, the food technologists needed something more than giving prizes to each other and wandering the exhibit hall nibbling Cheezo Nuggets. Thus, for three days, scholarly papers were given.

The authors of these papers were not just representatives from such food companies as Burger King and Dow Chemical, but professors from food science departments and officials from the Food and Drug Administration and the Department of Agriculture.

Pressure Soon

A layman might conclude that the viewpoints from academia and the government would counter the self-serving ideas of the industry; it is common, however, for food science professors to be subsidized by food companies and to be quite willing to accept such support. As for government officials, their "independence" is open to question, too; FDA and USDA officials regularly shuttle back and forth between the bureaucracy and the board room.

If the exhibit booths reveal what the food technologists have already concocted, some of the scholarly papers suggest what may be down the road. A professor from Michigan State's agricultural engineering department reviewed the role of air in processing food.

We will soon be feeling the pressures to conserve water, he said, and the food industry will be forced to find substitutes for water in processing operations. "Many applications in food processing operations suggest that air would be an acceptable substitute for water."

Despite the exhibits, prizes and papers that suggested the food technologists were enjoying a successful convention, not everything was total harmony. In the convention hall lobby Dr. Michael Jacobson, 28, a micribiologist from the centre for science in the public interest in Washington set up a portable booth to sell several booklets describing the dangers of food additives and chemicals.

Jacobson is the author of "Eater's Digest," a layman's guide to safe and unsafe additives. His presence at the fake-food convention was like a pacifist at the war college, a hermit in Times Square, Jane Fonda in the American Legion parade.

Though this young Ph.D. wore dungarees and had hair a few hundered per cent longer and bushier than the average technologist, he conducted himself quietly and politely. He wasn t always that way.

Memorial Award

At last year's convention in Minneapolis, Jacobson smuggled himself into the award ceremony and crouched by the side of the stage. At the right moment he sprang forward carrying a large, shiny garbage can. He seized the mike and presented the can as the "first Bon Vivant Vichyssoiss Memorial Award." The recipient was the entire food industry for its work in "destroying the American people's concept of good nutrition."

The shocked scientists hooted Jacobson out of the hall for that stunt. Many were amazed to see him back this year, however, and hauling another garbage can at that. But this time he came as an invited speaker, asked by an official of the Ocean Spray cranberry people.

The IFT apparently acted on the theory it was safer to let this heretic in the front door and keep an eye on him rather than have him sneak in the back door but not know his next move. The institute president, Ben Buchanan of General Foods, went out of his way to make Jacobson feel at home. Buchanan sought out the young scientist, a former worker and had a cordial chat.

In his speech Jacobson did not return the coridality. He listed sucn lapses as rotten canned fish, bultism in soup cans, banned additives. "I have talked at this meeting with dozens of food technologists," Jacobson said, "and everyone points a finger at the other guy." Oh yes, sugar is a problem, but our candy is only a minor part of anyone's diet; we don't intend it to replace real food. . . ."

"If the public wants something that industry scientists know contributes to a bad diet and to some of the most serious illnesses, should industry try to sell as much of it as fast as it can?"

Jacobson received polite, subdued applause. Later in the afternoon he made another speech and had no applause at all: When he awarded General Mills the second annual Bon Viant Vichyssoise Memorial award. Jacobson said that such General Mills products as Kaboom, Sir Grapefellow, Baron Von Redberry and Franken Berry contained between 30 and 50 per cent sugar, and were therefore more candy than cereal. He had a garbage can for General Mills, but no official came forward to receive the prize.

'It's Awful'

Although Jacobson's views were dismissed by the technologists, he was not totally alone. Surprisingly, a former president of IFT, George Stewart, now of the University of California at Davis, was so overcome by the bizarre sights among the exhibit booths that he told a reporter: "I worry about it. I think it's awful. I don't know where it's taking us. There's a lot of stuff being put on the market that's not food. I worry whether my kids and I will be able to get good food. We may be losing a social and cultural good. But I'm in a minority."

The IFT, as an organization, is not insensitive to members like Stewart. An example of its concern was a debate in which sides discussed the merits of nutrition education or supplementation of foods. One side argued that since millions of North Americans deliberately eat poorly, food processors have a responsibility to enrich these products via fortification.

The trend toward fortification is growing. It suggests, first, that the food industry is trying to stay a jump ahead of its critics who are slowly convincing the average consumer that large amounts of food are junk. "But how can you call our product junk?" asks the food company. "We're fortifying it with vitamins."

Thus, a product made of cheap ingredients like sugar and water that carries a large announcement on the label that vitamin A has been added easily dupes the consumer. Meanwhile, foods that have been fortified with vitamin A by nature, not the chemist, are passed over.

Hospital Monitor Helps Save Babies

A fetal monitor purchased by Victoria General Hospital in July has already had a part in pulling three babies through hazardous births.

The $7,500 machine monitors the baby's heartbeat and the mother's contractions.

Mrs. Madeleine Shorthill, head nurse in obstetrics and gynocology at the hospital, said the three babies were showing heart patterns indicating they were suffering from a lack of oxygen, a problem which can stem from umbilical cord or placenta.

Because it is dangerous to leave babies being born in that condition for long, all three were delivered by cesarian section.

"It would have been impossible to detect this problem without the monitor," said Mrs. Shorthill.

Central Lions of Victoria donated two-thirds of the cost of the monitor.

Brushing Habit Can Hurt Hair

CHICAGO (UPI) — People who brush their hair 100 strokes daily to keep it healthy and shining may be hurting rather than helping their crowning glory.

Experts, meeting at an American Medical Association conference in Chicago, warned that excessive brushing and combing actually damages hair.

The most degradative hair care process is combing. This is due to the force applied in repeated strokes.

"Brush and comb to groom, not to treat," said Dr. Norman Orentreich, of New York, who developed the hair transplant.

"There is good evidence that it causes hair loss."

As for that healthy, vibrant, glowing hair referred to in commercials for hair tonics and other such potions, the doctors said that there is no such thing.

"The plain, unadorned—bald, if you will—truth is that hair is as dead as any fibrous cord, even when it is being manufactured within the follicle," said Dr. William Montagna, of Beaverton, Oregon.

Since hair is dead, the experts agreed, it cannot be "fed" with "protein or lemons or anything else."

The hair experts, however, said their was no truth to the tale that frequent shampooing of hair produced baldness. They suggested that hair should be washed only as frequently as necessary and that more frequent washings could break hairs.

Persons with very oily hair could shampoo daily, they said, while persons with dry hair would do well to go four to seven days without shampooing, if there is no unusual exposure to dirt.

The experts also agreed that it is impossible to identify people through examination of hair.

"The size, color distribution and wear of hair cuticles differs so widely for each person that the practice of using hair for individual identification by those in forensic medicine has gradually become obsolete and outmoded," Montagna said.

SINGING ALONG, Lorne Daley, a leader with the Kitchener parks and recreation program for disabled children at a public school, strums his guitar as the children sing popular folk songs. Lorne, a third-year recreation student at the University of Waterloo, was blinded in an industrial accident. He is the first blind leader in the program.

Brunswick Stew No. 2 Change for Chicken

By MARY MOORE

In July I recommended that you buy a "utility" chicken and make Brunswick Stew.

This idea was popular with you, according to your letters.

Since then I have made Brunswick Stew a different way.

Put the pleasure back into your dinners by changing your ways of serving chicken.

BRUNSWICK STEW NO. 2
(serves 8 to 10)
(freezes satisfactorily)

4 c. cut up cooked chicken
3 c. chicken broth (from cooking chicken)
1 bay leaf
¼ tsp. rosemary
2 tsp. salt
1 chicken bouillon cube
1 and one-third c. diced potatoes
1 onion chopped
1 and one-third c. raw corn cut from cobs (OR one 10-oz. can kernel corn)
1½ c. tomatoes (canned or fresh, cored and peeled)
1 12-oz. pkg. fresh frozen large limas
1 c. thinly sliced slender zucchini, unpeeled
4 Tbsp. cornstarch
½ c. water.

Combine all ingredients in order given and simmer covered until potatoes and onions are tender — about 1 hour. Stir cornstarch into cold water and stir into stew until thickened.

NOTES: (1) We had enough of this stew for three meals for our small family so obviously I froze the surplus. (2) This is delicious served with hot tea biscuits as it was in the Southern United States where the dish originated. (3) A black squirrel was one of the original ingredients in the 19th century. (4) Ucchini is a substitute for the okra called for in the original.

Clip this recipe. It is a beauty.

Try Turkey Talk

DEAR ABBY: It might do your correspondent whose husband wants no bodily contact except sex good to know that there are others with the same problem.

I have a husband who wants no bodily contact outside sex. Even kisses are few and far between. If I sit too close to him in the car, I get an elbow in the ribs. If I get too close to him in bed, I get a sharp nudge and an admonition to move over! He has a healthy appetite for sex, however, although he is completely lacking in the tenderness that turns a woman on.

After years of brooding and studying, I found an explanation for his hangup. (Explanations don't solve problems, but they do help you to be more patient and understanding.)

My husband was an unwanted baby, and his mother let him know this from the start. He had very little cuddling and fondling at home. He has never learned how to accept physical love because he has never had any, and consequently, he doesn't know how to give any.

For years I felt I was unattractive and unlovable. Now I know it's not something lacking in me, it's something lacking in him. Knowing this takes the sting out of it. — Resigned.

DEAR RESIGNED: Your husband's lack of tenderness, which is simply his reluctance to learn how to please his partner, was learned, and that which was learned can be unlearned. Don't "resign" yourself in a martyred manner. Talk turkey to your man. He is capable of understanding a few explanations, too.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I called on a thriving trucking company, whose business it is to ship. I was asked to wait a few minutes as the owner was busy on a long distance call.

While I waited, the receptionist, a very attractive young woman, constantly cracked her chewing gum. The waiting time grew longer, and the noise of that gum cracking became more and more irritating.

Finally, my nerves couldn't take it any longer, so I told the receptionist I would come back later, and I left.

I located another hauler — one whose receptionist did not chew gum!

I wonder what the owner of that first truck line would say if he knew that his receptionist's gum-chewing was responsible for his having lost a good account?—Nameless, Please

DEAR NAMELESS: He probably would have chewed her out—but good!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 40-year-old woman with children away at boarding schools. My husband and I are divorced, but we haven't told our children about it for fear they may hate us for life.

The children go to school in Ohio. I live in North Carolina, and my husband lives in California. Whenever the kids come home, he flies down here and brings enough of his clothes with him to make them think he is still living here with me. He is complaining that it is getting to be a terrible expense, and if I am going to continue this pretense I will have to start paying for his transportation.

I am only a part-time cocktail waitress and make just enough to live in comfort. My husband is paying for the children's education. Please, help me. T.C.

DEAR T.: Put an end to the ridiculous charade and tell your children that Daddy doesn't live there anymore. They'll survive.

Breathing in Step

Undoubtedly one of the most difficult adjustments in a marriage is learning how to breathe.

Of course, breathing during the day is relatively simple, even for newlyweds. The problem arises only at night when one attempts to breathe in a double bed.

UNISON BREATHING

Initially you attempt to breathe in unison. You soon discover that, although otherwise you are perfectly well-suited to each other, you breathe at wildly divergent rates. Some find that to retain a semblance of unison they must pant like an exhausted Great Dane; others, married to deep-breathers, turn blue.

TANDEM BREATHING

Besides involving all the timing problems of unison breathing, the carbon dioxide exchange occurring during face-to-face tandem breathing (otherwise known as inhaling each other's exhale) is not beneficial unless one of you is a plant.

REGULAR BREATHING

Eventually, about 2 a.m., you resolve to revert to regular breathing. Unfortunately, although you have been regular-breathing successfully for over twenty years, you find that suddenly this automatic reflex has become a strangely foreign exercise. "In goes the good air," you murmur, "out goes the bad air." It invariably feels as if you're doing it all wrong.

By now your bed partner is blissfully asleep, completely unaware that you have lost a vital bodily function. He is not only asleep, but snoring. Isn't that cute? Just like a saw. "Ah-whoof, Ah-whoof." Such a regular rhythm. "Ah-whoof, Ah-whoof, Ah." The sudden absence of a corresponding "whoof" jolts you from semi-consciousness, and you leap to all fours, certain that he had experienced a cardiac arrest. Just as you begin to attempt mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, he "whoofs" into your nose.

It may help to console yourself with the fact that, given ten or twelve years, you may become accustomed to breathing in a double bed. While not necessarily true, it may help you get to sleep.

Bootmaker Fast Vanishing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Emanuel Marks introduces himself as "a bespoke bootmaker of Sydney, Australia" but he looks more like a male counterpart to Mary Poppins. Either way he is one of a vanishing breed.

He wears a black bowler, checked waistcoat, a proper monocle and a neatly-trimmed white beard. He twirls a bamboo walking stick.

"I'm a bespoke bootmaker of Sydney, Australia," he announced during a recent visit here. "I make shoes to measure and I've got quite a lot of clients in this part of the world.

"This is my third trip around the world," the 73-year-old craftsman explained, and promptly produced three letters of introduction.

But Marks readily supplied his own introduction, complete with background and client descriptions.

"I was born May 5, 1900; my mother, who is still alive, is 91. My father was a bootmaker . . .

"There were 90 bootmakers in Sydney in 1925 and now there are two or three only. Most of the medicos in Sydney either use me or my clients."

He said the foot check he gives customers is an important and unique part of his work.

"And in five minutes they know what they need to do before they spend $400 or $500 visiting a general practitioner, an orthopedic surgeon, radiologist, chiropractor," he said.

And he added with characteristic modesty, "My type are fast fading out."

Marks said he is trying to make people realize "the things they are missing by not aligning their sights on a worthwhile object, the human foot—much more important than antique furniture or diamonds or jewelry."

And he added that there is something else people should realize about footwear: "That is that, by looking at your feet —if you're wearing shoes to measure—you must be a person of quality."

Tapestry On Show At Museum

The Overlord Embroidery — a modern counterpart of the Bayeux Tapestry — is on display at the Canadian War Museum in Ottawa until November 15.

The embroidery commemorates not only Operation Overlord, the Allied invasion of Europe which began on June 6, 1944, but also the efforts and activities of the British people during the preceding years of the war. It traces the story of the Overlord from 1940 to victory in the Battle of France in 1944. It places special emphasis on the national effort that secured Britain from invasion and made eventual victory possible. In addition to the part played by the soldiers, sailors and airmen of the British Commonwealth, the United States and the Allies, the embroidery illustrates the contribution made by the civilians, farmworkers, merchant seamen, factory workers, civil defence workers, women and children.

The tapestry, which consists of 33 panels and measures a total of 264 feet in length, was designed by Miss Sandra Lawrence, who was guided and advised by representatives of the Fighting Services and the Ministry of Defence. The embroidery was made by the Royal School of Needlework, London, and the whole work has taken over five years to complete.

Lord Dulverton, who commissioned the embroidery, intends to present it to Britain's Imperial War Museum, where it is to be displayed in a specially designed gallery.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

We Canadians use an enormous amount of water, both in our homes and in industry. Did you kow that the manufacture of a ton of steel requires as much as 70,000 gallons of water? And did you realize that to produce a ton of synthetic rubber up to 40,000 gallons are needed?

The 12-page booklet "Water Pollution" discusses the growing problem and what should be done to reduce it. It also points out how the effects of pollution vary. The water may become cloudy, foamy, colored warmer or radioactive. It may acquire an unpleasant taste or odour or it may harbor poisonous substances.

Too many Canadians have become complacent about the restrictions and hazards water pollution imposes upon them. If they felt more strongly about this problem, they could actively strive to reduce it. The booklet says that only strong and continued public demand for clean water will create the climate necessary to support strong government measures against polluters. It urges readers to join one of the many groups that are actively concerned with pollution problems.

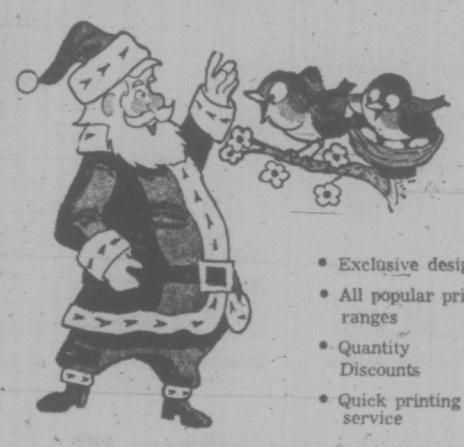

A number of national groups are listed. You can write to any of these and ask them to put you in touch with a group in your neighborhood.

Commune Differs

BOURGET, Ont. (CP) — Le Domaine du Partage is a commune—with a difference.

Twenty-three families share a 100-acre farm near this community about 60 miles southeast of Ottawa, and after three years they still see their experience as just beginning.

A section of the farm is divided into building lots 100 by 150 feet, which each member of the incorporated group can own individually, setting up his house, trailer home or other accommodation. The rest of the farm is strictly a community affair.

The members share tools and manpower to develop the farm, aiming also for personal fulfilment.

While the parents work together to improve the facilities in their "commune," the children play in a common playground, an artificial lake, a swimming pool and the wide-open spaces.

Members of the group, which includes doctors, plumbers, professors and bus drivers, work in nearby towns and villages.

Originally from Ottawa, the core group of 10, all French-speaking Roman Catholics, say they selected additional members on the basis of their religious, moral, cultural, intellectual and social values.

The principal idea is to live a truly community-oriented life, president Jacques Gibeault says.

The average member's age is between 35 and 40. Including children, 138 persons live on the farm.

Their community centre, a renovated 150-year-old house, is one of their proudest achievements.

Their current projects include a mini-golf course and raising livestock.

KARATE WHIZ while her classmates are concerned with more ordinary activities, nine-year-old Sheina Hughes of Raymond, Alta., concentrates on learning the ancient art. Sheina, who now holds her yellow belt, was the '72 south Alberta champion and won a first in the '73 forms.

'Doctors Can Harm Health'

TORONTO (CP) — A soon-to-be-published book by a Toronto physician says doctors can be bad for your health.

In Dr. Andrew Malleson's Need Your Doctor Be So Useless? the 42-year-old physician contends that health is far too important a matter to be left to medical practitioners.

Medical doctors are tradition-bound, inadequately trained, and more interested in treatment than in prevention because treatment assures profitable repeat business, Malleson says.

Soon to be published by Methuen Publications, the book, Dr. Malleson says, will likely make him one of the least popular members of the Canadian Medical Association.

It has already caused a stir in professional circles in the United Kingdom, where it was recently published.

Malleson, came to Canada four years ago after training and practising as a general practitioner, internist and psychiatrist in the United Kingdom. He now heads the crisis intervention centre at Toronto Queen Street Mental Health Centre.

He says mistreatment of patients is responsible for thousands of cases of "diseases of medical practice," caused by prescribing antiquated, unseless and harmful medicines.

Coughs, colds, infections, insomnia, diarrhea and constipation are often treated with major antibiotics that are capable of inducing fatal side effects in some patients.

"Most of the standard treatments prescribed by GPs for minor physical illness not only confound the principles of scientific medicine, but are contrary to common sense," he says. A cup of hot tea would be more effective in some cases.

Doctors and patients often engage in elaborate games of make-believe, the book says.

The doctor pretends that he can cure a great many conditions — and the patient subscribes whole-heartedly to this belief.

"Medicine is taking the place of the church in providing reassurance and it is using the mystique of science to do so," he said in an interview.

"I wrote the book to encourage the medical profession to re-examine the way they're practising medicine. I want to stir things up."

He says doctors tend to ignore prevention of illness and to concentrate instead on treatment of symptoms.

"Cigarettes, alcohol, physical inactivity and overeating are the major contributors to several of the leading causes of death, yet medicine has little help to offer for these self-induced conditions."

Toronto doctors are unaccustomed to thinking in terms of prevention, he contends, and he is consequently pessimistic about the future of medical services here.

Doctors do comparatively little to change the lifestyle of their patients, Dr. Malleson says. Instead, they keep treating symptoms.

As an example he mentioned the prescribing of tranquillizers for an obese patient who is feeling uncomfortable.

The "fee for service" system encourages shodddy treatment by doctors because it is lucurative to have the patient repeatedly in the office for further treatment of the symptoms, not the disease.

Malleson contends that psychiatry is in a muddle because doctors fail to distinquish people with brain disease and people whose aberrant behavior is due to faulty training in early life.

A disproportionate number of psychiatrists are in private practice, looking after middle-class neurotics, many of whom are not seriously ill, he says.

"The sickest mental patients are in mental hospitals and most psychiatrists are not very anxious to look after them."

Canadian doctors are afflicted by an excessively paternalistic attitude that actually harms some patients such as alcoholics.

"We're giving the impression that alcoholism is a sickness which the doctor can cure. So the patient waits for the doctor to cure him. Actually, recovery is the ultimate responsibility of the patient.

"One reason Alcoholics Anonymous is so successful is that it is not run by doctors. It emphasizes self-help."

Woman Medic Challenged By Tradition

LEWISTON, Me (AP) — As a medical student at the University of Pennsylvania, Virginia Soules visited the emergency room of a Philadelphia hospital to see operations.

A male resident on duty asked her: "What's the matter: Couldn't you get a date?"

She says this is one of the many insulting comments she endured as a female medical student.

A frequent remark, she says, was: "How can you take the place of a man? A man would be more serious."

Now her seriousness no longer is questioned, she says. A resident in the embryonic Family Practice Residency Program co-ordinated by five Maine hospitals, she is one of the first women to receive staff privileges at Augusta General Hospital.

Petite and blonde, 27-year-old Soules explained during a break in her rotation schedule at Lewiston's Central Maine General Hospital that now she has a different problem with patients.

"Nobody really believes I'm a doctor," she said.

She plans to join a group family practice in rural Maine. Before that, however, she hopes to be a college physician for a few years to get a chance to encourage women undergraduates into medicine.

She lives in a lakefront cottage with a St. Bernard and her husband.

She describes her husband as "an unpublished poet."

She says there is no resentment on his part about her profession.

"There's some role reversal. I come home at night pooped and he fixes me a drink and is full of energy and ready to talk. It's nice to be able to support somebody you believe in."

Soules says she would prefer to work in a system of socialized medicine because "I'm uncomfortable with the thought of working in a situation where I'd be causing anyone financial hardship."

"Medicine today is such a mess. It's so unavailable to so many people, so expensive and there's no standard or practice by which patients can judge whether their doctor is doing a good job."

She thinks that eventually medicine in North America will follow the trend in the Soviet Union and China where there are more women doctors than men.

"The men here will find some other status and money job and leave medicine to the women," she said. "Being a doctor isn't a status job. It's like being a teacher.

"I think medicine is going to change in the right direction with more women in it.

Also, it's lonely being a woman doctor. When you meet another one, there's tremendous empathy. It's like being in a secret society."

Cleaning Job Bares 'Soul'

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Thousands of workers, armed with scrubbing brushes gallons of paint and elbow grease, have been sent out to reveal the "soul" of the Argentine capital.

"They say that the soul shines through the face, so lets's clean the face of the city so that the purity of soul does shine through," Buenos Aires Mayor Jose Embrioni told workers and volunteers.

For months, Buenos Aires has been festooned with political posters and daubed with party slogans. There was scarcely a wall, building, monument or lamp post untouched.

In the space of nine months Argentina has had three elections and four presidents.

Every political development, which began with the initial return of Gen. Juan Peron from exile in November last year and was climaxed by his re-election to the presidency last month, required a new set of slogans and posters.

The result, officials said, was 50,000 tons of posters.

Trade Balance Still Ahead But Slipping

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's favorable balance of trade with the rest of the world, while still running strong ahead of last year, slipped in the third quarter of 1973 to less than one-third its second-quarter surplus, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Total exports the first nine months of this year were $17.8 billion and imports totalled $16.7 billion for a trade surplus of $1.1 billion, compared with a $650 million surplus in the corresponding period of 1972.

But "with a decline of $176 million" in revised exports, Canada's third-quarter merchandise trade surplus of $196 million stood at about a third of the level of $614 million in the second quarter, and compared with $359 million in the first quarter," Statistics Canada said.

"The deterioration in the trade balance resulted from a turnaround between the second and third quarters from a surplus of $239 million to a deficit of $54 million in trade with the U.S. along with a fall in the surplus with overseas countries of $126 million," said the report based on preliminary figures.

Canada's surplus with the U.S., this country's chief trading partner, totalled $465.5 million so far this year, down $277 million from the same point in 1972.

This was because Canadian purchases in the U.S., totalling $11.8 billion this year, increased $277 million more than U.S. purchases of $12.3 billion in this country.

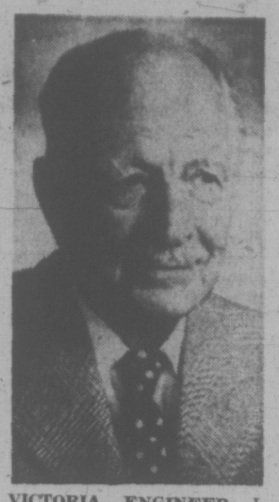

"For the January-September period, unadjusted imports from all countries were up 23 per cent to $16.7 billion from the same period in 1972," Statistics Canada said.

"Imports from the United States, which represented 71 per cent of total purchases in 1973, made up 80 per cent of the increase from 1972. Automotive and related products, industrial machinery, aircraft and food represented some 58 per cent of the rise over the nine months of 1972 in purchases from the U.S.," the report added.

"Crude petroleum, food, apparel and footwear and industrial machinery were 39 per cent of imports from overseas countries in 1973 and 57 per cent of the import increase from this area over 1972," it said.

Among other important trading partners, Canada's surplus with the United Kingdom rose to $338.6 million the first nine months of this year from $251.3 million in the corresponding period of 1972; a 1972 deficit of $110.9 million with other Commonwealth and preferred countries shrank to a $57 million deficit; a $125.4 million deficit with Japan the first nine months of last year turned around dramatically to a $447 million surplus this year; and the 1972 deficit of $73.6 million with the European Economic Community turned into a small surplus of $1.4 million, the report said.

Canada is running a $176.8 million trade deficit with Latin America so far this year, up sharply from a $45.7 million deficit for the first three quarters of last year.

VICTORIA ENGINEER L. Austin Wright, of 670 Dallas, has been awarded the first Can-Am Civil Engineering Amity Award from the American Society of Civil Engineers for his efforts in promoting co-operation and joint action between American and Canadian civil engineers.

SWAG Brief to Government Blasts 'Piecemeal' Remedies

Attempts by the provincial government to remedy injustices to women have been piecemeal and lack a systematic approach, says a brief presented Wednesday to a caucus committee.

No real progress will be made to end gross and obvious discrimination, the report says, until a specific ministry is created to show initiative and leadership.

The brief, presented by the Group, was presented to the Status of Women Action caucus committee on establishing priorities on behalf of women.

"Depending vaguely on every government department to bring about the serious and fundamental reforms required will end in dismal failure," the report predicts.

"The solution to many important and varied problems hinges on the creation of a perceptive Ministry of Women's Affairs." The brief singles out two recent developments which it says shows a "lack of government awareness."

"Under the new Training Act proposed by the attorney general, funding for law students to train as policemen overlooks the fact that — at least in the Greater Victoria area — women are not hired as full-fledged policewomen. The opportunity can be utilized by male students only — which negates its policy of 'equality of education.'"

It points to a "lack of understanding" within the provincial government that there is nothing to "the Maternity Protection Act which requires its posting on employment premises.

"SWAG is aware of cases where female employees were expected to leave when they became pregnant."

A full department of women's affairs would be able to research thoroughly various problems, it says.

Human Rights legislation, equal opportunity in the civil service, education and a revamping of the role of Family court are also stressed as areas of extreme importance.

"Having received complaints from women who feel their cases were not properly or fairly dealt with at Family Court, we are disturbed that conditions are such that it is not able to properly fulfil its functions."

SWAG recommends the following changes:

—That family cases be dealt with by a specialist in family law, rather than a prosecutor.

—That cases of threat and assault within the family be dealt with by the family court (rather than in provincial criminal court).

—That divorce come under the family courts.

—That the government assume the responsibility of securing payment from a deserting husband and make sure that the family receives support.

BURTONS BESIEGED

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (Reuter) — Reporters besieged a luxury hotel here after a newspaper reported film actress Elizabeth Taylor and actor Richard Burton were staying there while awaiting a "quickie" divorce here.

But it turned out the couple were Harry and Elizabeth Burton of South Carolina.

Newsprint Hike Seen

MONTREAL (UPI) Newsprint prices may jump to $245 a ton by mid-1974, partly as a result of higher wages to newsprint workers, the president of Bowater Inc. has predicted.

Hugh Joyce said Wednesday the price of newsprint may have to go up to between $235 and $245 a ton to give paper manufacturers a level of revenue to justify expanding production.

Bowater is the holding company of North America for a British group—Bowater Corp. Ltd.

SOCRED CLUB EYED FOR UVIC

A University of Victoria graduate student is trying to set up a Social Credit club on campus.

Dianne Hartwick, 22, a graduate student in special education from West Vancouver, is planning to hold an organizational meeting within the next two weeks.

She hopes the club will hold regular meetings, publish a newsletter, and bring MLAs to campus as guest speakers, as well as representing Social Credit in UVic's annual model parliament.

Campus NDP, Liberal and Conservative clubs have taken part in the model parliament in past years, but no Socreds.

People who believed in free enterprise should back Social Credit because it is the strongest party, says Hartwick.

City Constables Win Promotion

Four city police constables were promoted to sergeant and three sergeants and 17 constables transferred to new divisions in a shuffle announced Wednesday by Chief John Gregory.

Promoted to sergeant were constables Kenneth Horsman, 44, Russell Redman, 49, Blake Green, 35, and John Burdyny, 54.

Horsman, 16 years on the force, moves into the detective division; Redman with 15 years service becomes a sergeant in the patrol division; Green, a constable for eight years, enters the general investigation and detective division, and Burdyny, a policeman since 1950, becomes NCO in charge of court detail.

Chief Gregory said the police commission approved the promotions Wednesday.

A total of 29 members of the force applied for the four sergeant posts, which have been vacant for several months, the chief said.

The staff transfers involved sergeants Jack Perry (from detective to patrol), Ron Bentley (from traffic to detective) and William Sommerville (from patrol to traffic).

Seventeen constables moved into new areas of the force's operations in what Gregory described as "a regular and intermittent" move designed to keep members "from getting into a rut" and rounding out their experience in all phases of police work.

'Waiting Room' Offered Jews

VIENNA (UPI) — The Austrian government tried to reconcile conflicting demands by Arabs and Israelis Wednesday, ordering a transit camp for Soviet Jews closed in two weeks but promising to open a new way station for the travellers.

The interior ministry said the Schoenau Castle transit camp would be closed as demanded by Arab kidnappers, but Russian Jews travelling to Israel would be allowed to stay at "waiting room" facilities at Traiskirchen near Vienna.

"We are in the process of modernizing Traiskirchen camp to ensure flawless transits in the shortest possible time," a ministry spokesman said. "We expect to close Schoenau Castle in about two weeks."

The announcement came a month after Chancellor Bruno Kreisky ordered Schoenau shut down to free four hostages held by a pair of Arab guerrillas. Kreisky's decision brought strong protests from Israel and Jewish organizations around the world.

Too Many 'Disease Clubs'

Dr. William Butler, rehabilitation director of Vancouver General Hospital, said Wednesday there is a need to re-organize services for the physically handicapped.

"At the present time there is too much in the way of disease clubs — one for one disease and one for another," he told a department of human resources conference on the needs of the physically disabled being held at the Queen Victoria Inn.

He said, while these "disease clubs" were necessary at one time, they have led to fragmentation of services.

Dr. Butler also criticized institutions for the physically handicapped where "we emphasize numbers of beds rather than service to patients."

DEER PURSUED ALONG STREETS

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A deer led pursuers on a five-hour chase through New Westminster streets and gardens before being cornered and calmed by a tranquillizing shot from a veterinary surgeon.

The tranquilized deer was loaded into a truck and taken to Vancouver's Stanley Park.

Barclay's in U.S.

LONDON (AP) — Barclay's Bank, Ltd., which last week announced plans to acquire a New York Sate bank, intends to make further expansion in the U.S., a spokesman says.

He said as a broad objective, "Barclay's would like a branch in every financial centre in the U.S. where the banking laws will allow it."

Dispute On Arson Claim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial fire marshal Ron Pollard told an inquest jury Wednesday there is no evidence to prove that arson was the cause of a fire Oct. 21 that killed five men.

Pollard told the jury "there is no evidence to show there was any flammable liquid there before the fire."

He said the fire at the Commercial Hotel could have started when someone dropped a cigarette butt, hot ashes or deliberately set the contents of garbage cans in a washroom on fire.

Pollard said "the appearance of flammable liquid burns in the hallway could have been caused by worn-down areas in the floor."

Funeral Held For Leader Of Church

Funeral services were held this afternoon for Mrs. Anne Chisholm Wilson, an active member of First United Church, who died Monday at the age of 91.

She was the widow of Rev. D. William George Wilson, minister emeritus of First United Church, who predeceased her in 1971 at the age of 102.

Mrs. Wilson, an accomplished figure skater and tennis player in her youth, was a former president of the Women's Canadian Club here, former president of the Women's Missionary Society of B.C. and a member of the national executive of the YWCA.

The Wilsons were married at Government House in Halifax when her father, Duncan Cameron Fraser, was lieutenant-governor.

Mrs. Wilson is survived by her daughter and son-in-law, Georgiana (Joey) and Charles Ossulston of San Francisco, three grandchildren, Anne, Peter and Alexandra, and several nieces and nephews.

Rev. Dr. Hugh A. McLeod officiated at the service, followed by burial at Royal Oak Burial Park.

Bergman Burgled

LONDON (AP) — Burglars stole jewels, furs and cash worth $24,000 from actress Ingrid Bergman's London apartment while she was on stage, the Swedish star said.

Spraying Postponed

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro announced Wednesday it has discontinued spraying the chemical dioxin pending completion of a provincial inquiry commission on pesticides and herbicides.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency has launched a widespread search across the U.S. for traces of the chemical, an agent of the herbicide, 2,4,5-T, which B.C. Hydro has used mixed with another chemical called tordon.

Dioxin is described as a deadly killer whose presence in 2,4,5-T was not detected until recently.

Smuggled Guns Found After B.C. Pen Hunt

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — A number of hand guns have been found following a two-day search of the British Columbia Penitentiary by prison staff and army personnel.

Jim Murphy, regional director of the penitentiary service, said it is believed the weapons were smuggled in before the security crackdown following an Oct. 5 prison disturbance. Murphy said the search for weapons would continue, but he believes "the crisis is over."

He disagreed with the prediction made this week by MP John Reynolds (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) that the prison was on the verge of a full-scale riot.

"There is always the possibility of some disturbance where 560 inmates are concerned but the indications are that the crisis is over," said Murphy.

In a telegram Tuesday to Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and Penitentiaries Commissioner Paul Faguy, B.C. penitentiary staff members asked for action to relieve a situation they said "is deteriorating rather than improving."

They called for transfer of about 100 prisoners to relieve overcrowding, an end to punishment of prisoners not involved in the disturbance and a full inquiry into prison conditions.

Murphy said he was able to reach agreement with senior personnel after a series of meetings in the last few days.

He confirmed that Frank Graves, director of the penitentiary, may retire early next year but denied that the retirement has any connection with the disturbance.

LABOR MEET JOBLESS ROW

VANCOUVER (CP) — Louis Kaufman, president of the Vancouver local of the Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, clashed Wednesday with the president of the B.C. Federation of Labor after suggesting many people collecting unemployment insurance spend their winters skiing.

Kaufman's suggestion also earned him a rebuke by his own union.

Federation president George Johnston protested "Kaufman's statement is contrary to the statistics. A lot of people want work, can't find work, and a lot of them are young people."

Johnston also charged "a lot of people are being harassed" by UIC benefits officers when claiming jobless benefits.

He said the federation has even produced a card to guide jobless workers so they're not trapped into disqualifying themselves when being questioned by benefits officers.

Bears Smoke Out Villages Of Alaska Salmon Harvest

SOUTH NAKNEK, Alaska (UPI) — There is such a scarcity of fish in Bristol Bay and tributaries that Alaska brown bears are invading villages looking for food.

"The smokehouses really got it this year," said Mrs. Donald Nielsen. "Some women decided to wait and freeze fish until the bears clear out and then smoke the salmon."

Nielsen, who lives in this Aleut village, produced a motion picture last summer about the lack of fish. One of the stars of this documentary is Nick Gregory, a veteran fisherman of Eskimo and Greek descent.

The title of the film, There Are No More Fish, were words spoken by Gregory as he sat on dock shaking his head.

"Ten years from now," said Gregory, "I'll take my grandson to the museum to show him the Bristol Bay red salmon.

"I'll tell him those are the fish that used to be in Bristol Bay. There are no more fish."

The film is a poignant protest by the people of southwestern Alaska who have watched bitterly as the red salmon have vanished.

The 1973 season was a financial disaster.

And the lack of fish has brought on the plague of bears.

Alaska brownies are the largest and most ferocious bears in the world. However, under ordinary circumstances, these survivors of the ice ages stay as far away from man as they can.

But hunger has changed that attitude and women like Mary Jane Nielsen live in fear. Intrusion by at least two bears a night is not unusual. Nielsen has counted three bears walking through South Naknek in broad daylight.

The Bristol Bay villagers also are bothered by what they call "head hunters." These are outside sports hunters looking for trophies and the natives accuse them of depleting the stocks of moose, caribou and other game with which the villagers attempt to supplement their diet.

The natives, who use every part of an animal — from hoof to nose — for food, clothing and other needs, are horrified when they come across a kill and find the head hacked off with the rest left to rot.

GLUE NOW, FLY LATER FOR $2,600

CHICAGO (UPI) — For the daring young men who could never afford a flying machine, the do-it-yourself show in Chicago has an answer.

All that is needed is some expoxy glue and $2,600 — the price of a Volkswagen.

In 600 manhours, a few prefabricated pieces of aluminum and a 70 horsepower engine can be converted into a single-seat, single-engine airplane that will cruise at 240 miles per hour and climb 2,000 feet a minute.

Normal cost would be about $60,000, says Don Winter of Bay City, Mich., a dealer for Bede Aircraft Inc. Winter started assembling a fuselage for one of the planes right in his booth when the do-it-yourself show opened Tuesday at the International Amphitheatre. He said the fuselage will be completed by the time the show ends Sunday.

The show, billed as the world's largest showroom of do-it-yourself products and repair instructions, is a revival of a series of do-it-yourself expositions which were held across the country during the post-second-World War years. The last was in 1954.

Exhibits at the revival ranged from lessons in piloting a houseboat, to macrame and weaving, to beer-brewing and energy conservation.

Rathie Conflict Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alderman Setty Pendakur says Bill Rathie, National Harbors Board head for the west coast, apparently has a conflict of interest between his NHB job and private business interests.

Rathie, a former mayor of Vancouver, is the majority shareholder and president of Vancouver Cold Storage Ltd., which has waterfront operations.

As a major shareholder in Vancouver Cold Storage, Rathie is presumably interested in the company making as much profit as it can, said the alderman.

But as NHB head for the coast Rathie controls the greater part of the Vancouver waterfront owned by the NHB and is the final authority locally on NHB leases.

According to Ald. Pendakur, whose civic waterfront committee is receiving proposals to build a fishermen's wharf in the area, the amount of land and water the NHB indicates it is prepared to lease would kill off a fishermen's wharf envisioned by the city.

"If the NHB wants to scuttle this project all they have to do is reduce the area they will lease out."

Ald. Pendakur said Rathie is in a conflict of interest position since as NHB head he is in position to decide on leases to potential competitors to facilities owned by Vancouver Cold Storage.

Rathie denied this, adding: "There is no conflict of interest involved as far as I'm concerned." He conceded Vancouver Cold Storage does have waterfront operations and that he is majority shareholder in the firm.

Pendakur said Rathie should be moved into some other kind of job than that of NHB head by the federal government.

"The onus is on him and the federal government to show that its political appointments are pure."

DANGEROUS GRANNY

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — A little old grandmother was turned back by security police at Boise Airport until she checker her slingshot in with her luggage.

"It was an armed slingshot," said A. V. Cox, United Air Lines station manager. "And it falls into the category of unacceptable items not allowed aboard an aircraft."

The unnamed woman, believed in her 70s, said it was a present for her grandson in Denver. But the guards were adamant after they found the weapon in her purse when she triggered the electronic warning signal Tuesday.

CITY PIANIST STRIKES GOLD

A gold medal, signifying he has achieved the highest marks in Canada, has been awarded pianist Allen Reiser in his Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto, diploma examination.

Reiser, 20, is a pupil of Robin Wood at Victoria Conservatory of Music.

His record includes placing second in senior piano at the 1973 finals of the National Competitive Festival of Music in Toronto, and winning the piano championship Victoria city medallion for the last two successive years in the local festival.

Singer Susan Pye has also won a silver medal and a Frederick Harris scholarship for achieving the highest mark in her grade in B.C.

Silver medals and FH scholarships have also been awarded to pianist Walter Prossnitz, Gloria Man-Wai Wong, Cindy Belfry and Charlene Hale, and to speech arts students Veronica Cooper and Kathryn Olafson.

A silver medal for gaining the highest marks in Western Canada in Grade VIII organ goes to Mary M. McCreadie.

Derek JAmes Muir, trombone, and Michael W. Rennie, accordion, were also winners of FH scholarships.

U.S. Moves To Lift DDT Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — DDT may be on the way back for use on crop and forest lands in an attempt to combat the spreading damage being done to trees by tussock and gypsy moths.

A house agriculture subcommittee unanimously voted Wednesday to authorize the secretary of agriculture to order the Environmental Protection Agency to lift its March, 1972, order banning use of the DDT insecticide in areas heavily infested with the moths.

The ban was originally ordered after environmentalists argued the powerful insecticide, which is the only weapon found to be effective against the moths was harming wildlife.

The subcommittee acted after getting testimony that more than 1 million acres of trees in Pennsylvania alone were killed by the gypsy moth and hundreds of thousands of acres of trees were also damaged in New England.

Tot's Lead Level High

TORONTO (CP) — A four-year-old child living in the area of Canada Metal Co. was admitted to hospital Wednesday after tests revealed an unusually high level of lead in his blood.

Hospital authorities said Joseph Stovey was admitted "largely as a precautionary measure" when tests showed he had a lead level of 55 micrograms per 100 millilitres of blood. A lead level of 40 micrograms is considered excessive by the World Health Organization.

He was the fourth person to be treated at hospital in the last week. His 20-month-old brother, James, was admitted to hospital Friday with a lead level of 93 micrograms.

Two other persons were also treated at hospital but not admitted.

Meanwhile, about 200 workers returned to their jobs Monday at the Canada Metal plant, ordered closed last week by the provincial ministry of the environment.

The stop-work order was overruled Tuesday by a supreme court judge who ruled the ministry's air management branch had not acted judiciously.

Mr. Justice Donald Keith criticized Colin Macfarlane, director of the air management branch, for not holding a hearing and collecting more evidence before closing the plant.

The government's closure order was issued after three residents of the east-central area where the plant is located were sent to hospital.

Kemper Gives Gory Details

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — Accused mass slayer Edmund Kemper, 24, testified Wednesday that he had a recurring fantasy of killing women, eating their bodies and talking to their severed heads.

Kemper, a burly highway worker charged with killing eight women including his mother, told a superior court jury he had this dream:

"I killed someone. I cut them up and ate them and kept the head on a shelf and talked to it. I said some of those things I would have said if she had been alive, in love with me and had she been caring of me."

Six of the victims were college co-eds. According to previous testimony, Kemper kept the heads of two of the young women in his residences for several hours before he disposed of them.

During cross-examination by defence attorney Jim Jackson on his client's fantasies, Kemper told of his childhood and said his parents quarrelled often. They finally divorced, he told the jury, but he had a fantasy "that the family was happy and loved me."

But, Kemper said, he felt rejected and unloved by his mother and began fantasizing "hitting her in the head with a hammer." He explained he felt she loved his two sisters more and his divorced father also had rejected him.

Kemper, a 6-foot-9 280-pounder, was sent to the California Youth Authority when he was five for the slaying of his maternal grandparents. He also served a term in state mental facilities.

He said he refused to tell state psychiatrists about his dreams of beheading and cannibalism.

"No, I would never have gotten out if I told psychiatrists of having sex with dead bodies and, in some cases, eating them," Kemper testified. "I never would have got out, ever. That's like condemning yourself to life in prison.

"I hid it from them. They can't see things going on in my mind."

The courtroom was crowded with teen-agers during Kemper's testimony. There were reports some schools allowed students to leave their classes to attend the tiral.

Judge Harry Brauer at one point said, "I'd be much happier if the courtroom weren't full of teen-age girls."

Ho Hum—Baby No. 38

LONDON — "I don't know why people make such a fuss," said Raimunde Carnauba when interviewed on the birth of his 38th child.

"They have given us a lot of work and worry but they are worth it," added Mrs. Carnauba, 54.

Carnauba, 58, and his wife Josinar live in Belem, Brazil. They were spotlighted in the new Guinness Book of Records published Wednesday as the current most prolific parents in the world.

Mrs. Carnauba was married at 15 and so far has had 14 sons and 24 daughters.

With its customary air of never being surprised, the book notes that a Russian peasant woman who had 69 children in the 19th century still holds the record in the most-children category.

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. — Hamlet police department was looking for the Great Pumpkin Wednesday. And not just because it was Halloween.

Police said a 96-pound pumpkin was stolen from the front yard of the Hamlet residence of — who else — Charles Brown.

Good grief!

PHILADELPHIA — U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Masterson says he cannot live on his $40,000 salary.

Masterson, appointed to the bench in 1967 by President Lyndon Johnson, says that is the reason he is resigning Nov. 16.

"I have found I cannot discharge my financial obligations to my family on my present judicial salary," Masterson said Tuesday. He said the decision was reached after "the most agonizing reflection and for the most compelling personal reason."

The 45-year-old jurist said he needed more income to support his five children, two of whom are in college. He said he will return to his former law firm, Morgan, Lewis and Bockus, as senior trial counsel.

ZURICH, Switzerland — A new trial with a chance for a lighter sentence has been granted Edith Irving, jailed for two years as a participant in her husband's book hoax, a phoney biography of Howard Hughes.

Mrs. Irving acted as a courier in Swiss bank transactions with $650,000 in advance payments given her husband, Clifford, by McGraw-Hill, the New York publisher victimized by the hoax.

She was convicted March 8 on a guilty plea, but was freed Wednesday pending a new trial.

BOSTON — Dr. Paul Dudley White, a pioneer in the study and treatment of heart disease, died Wednesday at the age of 87.

White, an apostle of exercise and a simple diet, died of complications from two strokes at Massachusetts General Hospital, where he began his medical career in 1913. His wife, Ina, was at his bedside.

In Washington, President Nixon said, "in the annals of medicine, Dr. Paul Dudley White will be remembered as a man who not only revolutionized the treatment of heart disease but also educated millions of Americans on how to prevent heart attacks."

HOUDINI RECORD BROKEN BY HEIR

NEW YORK (AP) — Escape artist Mario Manzini, who sees himself as heir of Harry Houdini, broke the legendary master's record Wednesday.

Fettered by 13 sets of handcuffs, Manzini said before he plunged into a swimming pool at a hotel here: "If I can't get out, I don't want anyone jumping in to get me."

He then dived to the bottom of the pool.

Wiggling and twisting in silver-studded bikini swim trunks, Manzini struggled with the restraints on his arms, about 40 pounds of deadweight metal.

He was back to the surface, free, in 46 seconds.

"Forty-six seconds. Whew!" exclaimed Manzini: "Houdini was watching me, wherever he is."

Houdini's own best effort at this event is said to be 90 seconds underwater, with six sets of handcuffs, in 1925.

Halloween was chosen as the appropriate date for the feat. It marks the 47th anniversary of Houdini's death at the age of 52.

VESCO INDICTED FOR THIRD TIME

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal grand jury Wednesday indicted fugitive financier Robert Vesco for the third time in the continuing effort to have him extradited to the United States from his Caribbean hideaway.

The sealed indictment, which was filed last July 20, charged that Vesco defrauded $50,000 from the International Controls Corp. of Fairfield, N.J., a firm he once controlled.

The previous indictments, which alleged attempted fraud, were ruled by a Costa Rican court to deal with non-extradictable offences. Bahama's courts never acted on them.

Vesco was indicted last May along with former attorney general John Mitchell and former commerce secretary Maurice Stans on charges of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury.

The three defendants and Harry Sears, a prominent New Jersey Republican, were accused of trying to influence a massive fraud investigation of Vesco in return for a secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

Vesco has been a fugitive since last February, dividing his time between his homes in Costa Rica and the Bahamas. At least two fugitive warrants are outstanding against him.

Stans and Mitchell are scheduled to go on trial Jan. 7. Sears will be tried later.

The latest indictment alleges that Vesco used $50,000 in ICC funds as part payment for stock in Investors Overseas Services Ltd., a Swiss financial complex. Vesco allegedly had asked Mitchell and Stans to influence a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of his alleged looting of $224 million from IOS.

DIGGER SEEKS GOD'S HELP

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The president of a gravediggers union local who is fasting in a cathedral here says he is asking God to side with him in a labor dispute with the Roman Catholic Church.

Sam Cimaglia, 49, was at Sacred Heart Cathedral today in the sixth day of a prayerful fast he says he feels will "enlist God's help" in his union's disagreement with the Newark archdiocese.

"I can't understand why this archdiocese is so strongly against a union shop," Cimaglia said.

Guess What's Back? –Medlar Fruit Trees

By HILDA BEASTALL

If it were left to the oldtime garden writers to popularize medlar fruit trees, nobody would grow them today.

But people do grow them for a variety of reasons, one being that the tree has beauty of form; it also has delightful flowers, luxuriantly rich foliage and unusual fruit.

The garden writers of the early 1900's spoke disparagingly about the fruit, saying that anyone who enjoyed rotten pears or apples was welcome to grow the tree but it was not worth devoting time or book space to discuss it.

Nevertheless medlars were more highly regarded in continental Europe where uses were found for the fruit in making wine and preserves.

The fact is that today medlar trees are available locally. It must be many years since they were offered for sale. The few established trees in the area are quite elderly, and beautiful.

Botanically the medlar is related to the apple and pear. Its botanical name is Mespilus germanica.

Native of Germany, it is a common fruit in Holland and the countries towards the southeast of Europe.

Like the other pomaceous fruits having a core of small seeds (Pear, apple, quince) the medlar will grow well in any garden soil which can be kept fertile and moist in summer. A heavy mulch of cow manure over the surface in early May aids these conditions. Trees are usually sold grafted on pear stock, though other stocks are used for suiting difficult soils.

As with most fruit trees, the early years of gardening care should be directed at shaping and avoiding overcrowded branches. Thus a well shaped medlar tree will show off its assets to the best advantage at its maximum height of about 20 feet.

The flowers are white, tinged with pink, and the curious twiggy branchlets make attractive vase designs indoors either when bare in winter or blossoming in spring. Since the flowers are borne on new growth each year, they can be cut freely.

In summer, the large handsome foliage takes over; then it begins to turn to the most subtle peachy bronze shades as the fruits develop. Again the tree is superbly attractive.

Gardeners who already have a medlar fruiting will know that the first frosts are needed to aid in the mellowing of the fruits. They do not "ripen" on the tree, but gradually reach the edible stage after about two weeks, in frost free storage.

The fruits soften, and turn to a yellow color, a sign they are fit to eat, or to make into preserves. The taste for them as a fresh fruit increases after you sample the first one.

So don't rush the picking. Leave medlars on the tree until a sharp frost is forecast, perhaps well along into November. Then pick while they are dry around midday, so that mould will not develop during the ripening period.

And don't believe without tasting, the story about them having the flavor of overripe pears. They don't (if properly ripened.

The oldtimers called it "bletting" from a French word "blette" meaning overripe. The word today is used almost exclusively in reference to the ripening of medlars.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, we have another example of a declarer who succumbed to the lure of an unnecessary finesse; and, as a result, lost a vulnerable game.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ K 10 8 5 3
♡ 8 7 5
◇ 2

SOUTH
♠ A Q J 9 2
♡ A 6 3
◇ 7 5
♣ K 6 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ◇	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

After winning the opening lead with his king of diamonds, West shifted to the deuce of clubs. Declarer put up the board's nine, which was covered by East's ten, and taken by South's king. Declarer next ruffed his remaining diamond. He then cashed the ace and queen of trumps, gathering in the outstanding pieces.

Hoping that West's club lead at trick two had been away from the club queen, declarer now led his four of clubs, intending to finesse dummy's jack. When West discarded a diamond on this lead, declarer's cause was lost. When play had ended, the defenders had made two heart tricks, one diamond, and one club.

Although it might well have been that West was leading away from the club queen, it was wrong for declarer to have led a club at trick six, intending to finesse. Instead, he should have cashed the heart ace, after which he would have led another heart.

As can be observed, it would not have mattered which opponent won the second heart lead. The best that that opponent could have done would have been to lead another heart, which would have been won by one of the defenders.

If West captured the third heart, he would have had no choice but to return either a heart or a diamond. And whichever of these red suits he led would be ruffed in dummy as declarer simultaneously discarded his losing club on this trick. And if East won the third heart lead, a diamond lead would enable South to get rid of his losing club as he ruffed the trick in dummy. If, instead, East elected to play back a club, the board's jack would win the trick via a "free" finesse.

In theory, if West after winning one of the heart leads, had led a club (on some other day, when he had a club), then declarer would have had no choice but to insert the board's jack, hoping that West possessed the club queen. But the point of the deal is, simply: why go out of your way to take a finesse when it may not be necessary to take it?

Webcor The Company behind the product is part of what you buy.

The full story of Webcor quality is beautifully told each time a Webcor product is turned on. Only then can you hear the rich vibrant sound that results from uncompromising quality in electronic engineering, component design and the priceless experience that 50 years of research and manufacturing know-how provide.

Every Webcor product is backed by two powerful forces: a time-honored name with over 50 years of "sound" experience — and U.S. Industries Inc., a billion dollar worldwide enterprise. That's why Webcor stands for great products. Each of the hundreds of parts of every Webcor product, from tiniest transistor radio to complete stereo system, conform precisely to rigid specifications. Each circuit is tested under extreme conditions to insure absolute dependability and flawless preformance.

REBOZO CASE CLOSED

WASHINGTON (WP)—The justice department said Wednesday it has decided Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo, President Nixon's close friend, did not engage in criminal conduct when he cashed $91,500 in stolen stock in 1968 and has closed its investigation.

The department made the comment after the Washington Post reported last Thursday a sworn statement and other records in a Miami court case indicated Rebozo cashed the stock after he was told by an insurance investigator it was stolen.

Rebozo's lawyer said the investigator visited Rebozo but did not tell Rebozo the stock was stolen.

The $91,500 in stock represented 300 of 900 shares of stock that had been stolen from the vaults of E. F. Hutton & Co., a New York stock brokerage firm. The entire 900 shares had been pledged as collateral for a loan from Key Biscayne Bank in Florida.

Rebozo, who is chairman and president of the bank, had handled the loan transaction.

Edward T. Joyce, deputy chief of the justice department's organized crime racketeering section, said the department made the decision not to prosecute last Friday, a day after the Post story appeared.

Magruder Urged Nixon To Pressure TV, Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Lowell P. Weicker revealed Wednesday night a White House memorandum suggesting three government regulatory agencies be used to stop what the Nixon administration considered unfair treatment by news media.

The Connecticut Republican said the memorandum, written by Jeb Magruder, recommended the Internal Revenue Service, the justice department anti-trust division and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) be used as a way to control news media.

The White House had no immediate comment on the development.

Magruder's lawyer, James Bierbower, declined to comment on the memorandum.

The memorandum, dated Oct. 17, 1969, was titled The Shotgun Versus the Rifle, and was intended for White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman.

Weicker, a member of the Senate Watergate committee, said he did not know whether Magruder's suggestions were ever implemented. But Weicker said he plans to ask the regulatory agencies.

The senator made the memorandum public in a television interview.

Magruder in the memorandum made the following suggestions:

—"Begin an official monitoring system through the FCC as soon as Dean Burch is officially on the board as chairman. If the monitoring system proves our point, we have the legitimate and legal rights to go to the networks, etc., and make official complaints from the FCC.

—"Utilize the anti-trust division to investigate various media relating to anti-trust violations. Even the possible threat of anti-trust action I think would be effective in changing their views . . .

—"Utilizing the Internal Revenue Service as a method to look into the various organizations that we are most concerned about. Just a threat of an IRS investigation will probably turn their approach."

Magruder also suggested what he considered unfair press coverage could be done away with by giving preference to media "favorites."

Gurney Probed

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. Edward J. Gurney Jr., a member of the Senate select Watergate committee, acknowledged Wednesday the justice department is investigating allegations that Florida builders secretly contributed large sums of money to him and expected preferential treatment by the Federal Housing Administration.

Gurney said he was instructed Sept. 10 by Thomas J. McTiernan of justice's criminal division not to discuss the case publicly until the investigation is completed.

The Florida Republican, according to the Miami Herald collected more than $300,000 in a secret "boosters" fund in 1971 and used the unreported campaign money for office and travel expenses and other unknown purposes.

The fund-raising, according to the Herald, continued for more than seven months after the FBI informed Gurney late in 1971 that one FHA builder had complained he was "shaken down."

'I Did No Wrong' Former A-G Swears

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former attorney-general Richard G. Kleindienst denied Wednesday he had perjured himself in Senate testimony last year and said he threatened to resign in 1971 when President Nixon told him to drop a major ITT antitrust case.

Kleindienst said his sworn testimony that "I was not interfered with by anybody at the White House" was given in connection with the settlement of ITT cases during the summer of 1971, not the recently disclosed White House attempt to force him to drop an ITT case the previous April.

"I did not perjure myself or give false information," Kleindienst said. "I have done no wrong."

The former top justice department official issued a four-page statement through his attorney as members of the Senate judiciary committee pressed anew for investigations of possible perjury during Kleindienst's confirmation hearings last year.

Senate majority whip Robert C. Byrd (D — W. Va.) called on the judiciary committee, of which he is a member, to reopen the 1972 inquiry to determine, "did the government lie about the ITT case and also did high government witnesses commit perjury?" Sen. Birch Bayh (D — Ind.) called on the justice department to answer promptly a 16-month-old committee request for a perjury investigation.

Kleindienst, defending his handling of ITT matters, said his threat forced a turnabout by President Nixon and enabled the government to settle the case favorably.

Deputy White House press secretary Gerald L. Warren said he would not dispute Kleindienst's assertion that he had threatened to resign, but added, "the president's actions and decisions were based on policy discussions and nothing else."

Grand Duke. One of the world's 3 great vodkas.

We challenged two world famous vodkas with our Grand Duke. The judges were panels of taste testers, people like you who enjoy good vodka.
They tasted and told us:
"Grand Duke's as smooth and light as the world's best."

Enjoy the best.

B210. Datsun's new economy number.

Introducing a brand new Datsun: The B210.
It is not Datsun policy to introduce new models every year. It is Datsun policy to improve each model whenever possible . . . until one more improvement means a whole new car. The Datsun B210. In hatchback, two-door and four-door models. It's the least expensive Datsun, so we call it our economy number. But like every Datsun ever made, the B210 is designed to give you all you really need in comfort and performance, too.

all you really need is a DATSUN

There are more than 1300 Datsun dealers in North America.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Supertanker Puget's Largest

CHERRY POINT, Wash. (AP) — The San Juan Venturer, 955-foot supertanker, tied up to ARCO's Cherry Point dock Wednesday to deliver crude oil.

The Venturer and her sister ship, San Juan Voyager, are the largest commercial ships ever to sail Puget Sound.

The Venturer left Saudi Arabia with a full load just before fighting broke out in the Middle East. It takes a tanker about a month to make the run from the Persian Gulf to Puget Sound.

CAPITAL REGIONAL DISTRICT

Pursuant to Section 766AA of the Municipal Act, the following text of By-law No. 151, cited as "Soil Removal By-law No. 1, 1973" is hereby published:

A BY-LAW TO REGULATE THE REMOVAL OF SOIL FROM ANY LANDS WITHIN THE ELECTORAL AREAS OF COLWOOD, LANGFORD, METCHOSIN, AND VIEW ROYAL, TO REQUIRE THE HOLDING OF A PERMIT FOR SUCH PURPOSE AND TO FIX THE FEE FOR SUCH PERMIT.

WHEREAS the Regional Board of the Capital Regional District has been empowered to undertake the function of regulation of the removal and deposit of soil in the Electoral Areas of Colwood, Langford, Metchosin, and View Royal under the provisions of subsection (4a) of Section 766 of the Municipal Act:

THEREFORE the Board of the Capital Regional District in open meeting assembled enacts as follows:

1. Definitions:
"Engineer" means the Director of Engineering from time to time of the Capital Regional District or his appointed representative.
"Clean Fill" means soil free from refuse, rubbie, and any undecomposed organic matter.
"Permit" means a permit for soil removal issued pursuant to this By-law.
"Soil" means soil, sand, gravel, rock or other substance of which land is composed.

2. (1) No person shall remove soil from any lands within the Electoral Areas of Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and View Royal without being the holder of a valid and subsisting permit therefor.
(2) Every permit shall expire after the expiration of 12 (Twelve) months from the date of its issue.
(3) An application for a permit shall be accompanied by a fee of $10.00 (Ten Dollars) per acre or Part of, shall be made by the owner of the lands at the Capital Regional District Offices on the form authorized by the Engineer for such purpose and shall show:
(a) The location and legal description of the property from which it is proposed to remove the soil;
(b) If required for reasonable cause by the Engineer, a plan in sufficent detail to indicate clearly the location of the proposed removal and the final grades after backfilling the excavation;
(c) The maximum depth of soil removal and the quantity of soil to be removed.

3. All permits for removal of soil pursuant to this By-law shall be issued by the Engineer in a form authorized by him.

4. (1) Subject to subsection (2) of this Section, no person shall remove soil from any lands within the Electoral Areas of Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and View Royal if:
(a) such removal would in any way endanger surrounding or neighboring lands

Sasquatch Rate Hits $100,000

The going rate on sasquatch nowadays is $100,000 — all you have to do is bring him back alive.

Canadian publishers McClelland and Stewart Ltd., who have recently published "Sasquatch," are offering a $100,000 reward for total possession and right to any live sasquatch.

The author, Don Hunter, a copy editor with the Vancouver Province, said in Victoria today the reward offer is insured by Lloyds of London.

The book, which will be on Victoria shelves Friday, is a story about the Pacific Northwest's legendary "apeman" and Rene Dahinden, said Hunter.

Dhinden is a Swiss-born Canadian who has spent the last 20 years attempting to track down the elusive sasquatch, said Hunter.

Neither Hunter nor Dahinden has ever said the sasquatch exists, he said, but they have not said it does not exist.

In the book Hunter describes the "incredible happenings that go on during these hunts."

HUNTER

For example, he said, in Bossburg, Washington, a group of sasquatch hunters discovered a footprint, apparently that of a crippled sasquatch.

To lure the beast back to the area one man hung "an eight-pound slab of beef" in a nearby tree while another man strung up a bunch of grapes. No one caught the sasquatch.

Another man told a stoy of how he was kidnapped and held captive by four sasquatch for a week.

"James Bond had nothing on these guys," said Hunter.

To date, he said, there have been three recorded sasquatch sightings on Vancouver Island — at Campbell River, Qualicum and Duncan.

Hunter's book does not include instructions on how to catch a sasquatch.

NUDE DANCER TAKES FALL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dancing topless and bottomless has its painful pitfalls.

Police responded Wednesday to a call that a young woman was in distress at an east end nightclub.

Eyewitnesses told them the naked dancer was doing fine until she tripped and landed on her light fantastic.

A police report noted: "Victim fell in sitting position onto case of empty beer bottles, breaking one. Victim received lacerations. . . ."

Highway Hike High Hazard

Saanich school board is "greatly concerned" about hazardous conditions for students walking along McDonald Park Rd. to Parkland senior secondary school, board chairman Rubymay Parrott said today.

The stretch of road between the school, at 10640 McDonald Park Rd., and the Patricia Bay Highway has no sidewalk and is bordered on each side by ditches and culverts.

Parrott said the school board has asked North Saanich, the municipality responsible for the road, to do something to improve conditions for pedestrians.

Mayor Trevor Davis said today the municipality cannot afford to make improvements to that stretch of the road this year.

"The problem is not of our making," Davis said. It was the school board that chose the McDonald Park Rd. site for the new high school, which opened for the first time this September, he said.

North Saanich has already taken the "emergency measure" of making improvements to the road, including sidewalks, between the school and Sidney, Davis said.

This work, considered a greater priority than the other stretch of road, is almost finished, he said.

Total cost of all improvements to McDonald Park Rd. will be around $200,000, he said, and council cannnot ask the taxpayers to bear that cost at one time.

"I'm not promising that it will be undertaken . . .," Davis said of improvements to the stretch of road between the school and Pat Bay Highway, "but at the moment we're planning it."

He said North Saanich asked Saanich school board if they would help pay for improvements to the road, and was refused.

Parrott said there was "no way" the school board can spend educational dollars fixing up roads.

"It is not our responsibility," she said. "It is a municipal responsibility."

"North Saanich is just going to have to find the money," said Parrott.

CENTRE LINE WASN'T THERE

Centre line marking had not been painted on a section of Sooke Road Aug. 26 when two cars collided, killing the two drivers involved, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday.

The jury found John O'Connor, 57, of 3620 Park Drive, Colwood, responsible for the accident which killed him and William McQuillin, also 57, of 2730 Hamilton.

O'Connor, the jury decided, was trying to make a right turn while driving on the wrong side of the road.

An RCMP constable told the inquest the highway had been resurfaced shortly before the accident, but the road markings had not been repainted.

The jury recommended that highways be painted immediately after the surface is laid.

'Pure' Environment Bunk, Whelan Says

TORONTO (CP) — It's ridiculous to talk about an "absolutely lily-white, pure environment," says federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

In a speech Wednesday night to the Davenport Liberal Association, Whelan said the only pure environment is one where humans do nothing to the land.

That meant no cultivating of crops or raising of livestock and no "roads, cities, communication networks and all of the conveniences we have today."

He said a compromise is needed, one that will combine a high standard of health with comfort and convenience.

No one could demand the impossible of the farmer, because every new environmental restriction would cost money, quality or productivity.

"Many Canadians are still not listening to common sense," he said.

"I am not saying that we should run rough-shod on animals or the environment," he added.

The question boiled down to whether plants, birds and animals were more important than humans.

A text of his speech was released in advance of delivery.

Oregon Trollers Stopped

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Salmon ocean troll fishery off Oregon ended at midnight Wednesday. The Oregon Fish Commission voted against extending the season into November after a hearing earlier in the day.

Staff biologists for the commission recommended that the season be ended unless a practical way could be found to harvest surplus hatchery salmon off some of the south coast rivers. The commission found no way to enforce a partial opening in that area.

Representatives of the troll fishing industry were divided at the hearing, about half favoring the closure and the rest asking for an extension.

Staff biologists said an extended troll season would endager wild stocks of Sacramento River spring and fall chinooks, Rogue and Umpqua River chinooks and Columbia River coho.

Troll seasons ended in Washington and British Columbia at midnight Wednesday, in California Sept. 30 and in Alaska Sept. 20.

Staff reports to the commission indicated that the troll fishery off Oregon this year reached an estimated three million pounds of chinook, the best since 1966.

Giant Firs Surrounded By 'Casts'

A Provincial Museum crew is making casts of trunks of four giant Douglas firs in the Greater Victoria Water District watershed before they are cut down next year.

The casts will be exhibited in the natural history gallery expected to be completed in 1975.

Museum director Bristol Foster said, except for stands of old trees in a few provincial parks, giants firs will have vanished in 25 years.

The new growth will be logged before they are 100 years old.

Casts are being made of trunks of trees believed to be between 500 and 600 years old. They will be about 18 feet high when completed and will look real.

To make the casts, the trunks are first coated with several layers of latex reinforced with cheese cloth. This is then peeled off and used as moulds to make fibreglass casts.

Members of the museum staff working on the project are Rennie Knowlton, Gordon Harper and Stuart Stark.

Sunken Tug Up; On Ways

The Vancouver tug Nitinat, which sank off Strongtide Island Sunday, was put up on the ways at Yarrows shipyard today.

She was salvaged by the tug Seaspan Wave late Tuesday.

A Yarrows spokesman said today the extent of damage would not be known until a complete survey had been carried out.

"However, when a ship has been submerged there's usually quite a bit of work to be done on the engine," he said. "Everything will have to be cleaned of salt water to stop corrosion."

The 104-foot tug was towing a barge with 12 railroad cars at the time of the incident. The barge and cargo was salvaged Sunday.

12 Placed On Standby To Mid-East

Twelve Victoria servicemen — six officers and six men — are on standby for duty in the Middle East with the United Nations Emergency Force.

The six officers selected are Major Peter Marcetta, Capt. Dennis Shanks and Capt. Brian Grissis, all of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry; Major William Hellquist of Royal Roads Military College, Capt. Pete Maclaren of CFB Esquimalt and Major Rodney Gillard of CFB Esquimalt's ship repair department.

An armed forces' spokesman said today, "We are still in the process of selecting the six men."

The Victorians will be joining the Canadian Airborne Regiment of Edmonton which will be the main component of the Canadian contingency.

The Canadian contribution will be provision of transportation, communications, equipment and personnel.

Richardson May Resign Unless West Gets Plant

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson declined direct comment today on reports that he is considering resigning if the West does not get the next heavy water plant. But he made it clear in an interview he strongly holds the view that the plant, when approved, should be in the West, specifically Manitoba.

During a brief break from a cabinet meeting, considering the whole energy picture, Mr. Richardson said in an interview that he would "find it difficult to live with a decision that did not include the prospect of the development of nuclear energy in Manitoba."

But he declined to be specific about what he would do if the heavy water plant is established in another area. He said the matter is still being discussed by cabinet, that he is presenting his views, and there will be no imminent announcement.

Other cabinet sources say Mr. Richardson is pulling no punches in his argument for the plant to be located in Manitoba.

One source said there was no talk of resignation by the defence minister, who represents the riding of Winnipeg South, "but he obviously has extremely strong feelings on this issue."

The minister said that apart from the construction of a heavy water plant in Manitoba, he would like to see a nuclear generating capability in the province. "Manitoba Hydro must decide whether they want this, and it would require federal financing."

When he was pressed about a possible resignation over the issue, Mr. Richardson said that "this is not something I would discuss publicly in any event."

As cabinet considered the energy situation, and specifically the announcement Energy Minister Donald Macdonald would make later in the day on fuel prices, the meeting stretched through the lunch hour.

Sources speculated that any announcement on the location of the next heavy water plant is several weeks away.

Whipping for Theft

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The government announced that whipping would be introduced as a punishment for stealing scarce foods. Rationing and price increases on Oct. 1 were followed by a jump in crop thefts.

Lower Tax For North Suggested

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal government should consider a reduced income taxes for persons working in the north, D. R. DeLaporte, vice-president of Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., suggested Wednesday.

Such a measure would help mining companies in the north cope with one of their most pressing problems — attracting workers to the harsh climate and isolation. Government might also subsidize transportation costs, he said.

Speaking during a panel discussion on mineral potential at the sixth national northern development conference, the Toronto executive said high wages and attractive fringe benefits are offset by the high taxes that must be paid.

Sniffer Plane For Finding Ore

EDMONTON (CP) — Airborne prospectors soon will be detecting important mineral deposits with a mechanical sniffer that finds ore bodies by their smell, said Dr. A. R. Barringer, president of an Ontario research company.

He said during a panel discussion at the sixth national northern development conference his company recently had spent $1.5 million developing the sniffer, or "air trace."

It would be used in an airplane's geochemistry lab along with magnetic surveys and traditional geological procedures.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Queen's Counsel appointments have become "political" with no regard given to merit or to any other qualification, a special committee said in recommending the practice be abolished.

The committee, composed of representatives of the Law Society of Manitoba, the Manitoba Bar Association and the Manitoba section of the Canadian Bar Association, made the recommendation to the Law Society in a "bare majority" report.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The provincial human rights commission said it has found no evidence of illegal discrimination against native students in a high school in the west-central Manitoba community of Winnipegosis.

It said, however, there was some "institutional discrimination" against students who must travel to the school from the native communities of Camperville and Duck Bay, about 35 and 45 miles away, respectively.

A group of students was withdrawn from Winnipegosis Collegiate in March by their parents after 23 students who staged a sit-in protest over discrimination were expelled from the school.

REGINA (CP) — Co-operatives are especially suited to help government face the task of economic development, Industry Minister Kim Thorson told a co-operative conference Wednesday.

The two-day conference was organized by the government to inform co-operatives about government policies. Thorson said co-ops can provide experts which government lacks to develop and service markets, do research into economic opportunities and provide leadership in economic life.

GLASS SHARD COUGHED-UP

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Ed Hardy, veteran Victoria policeman, has literally coughed up a menacing memento of a plane crash almost two years ago.

It's a fragment of plexiglass with razor-sharp edges, apparently from the shattered windscreen of the plane, which was swept into one of Hardy's lungs along with water he swallowed when the plane flipped upside-down into the Courtenay River.

The fragment is triangular, measuring just over an inch long, better than half an inch wide and eighth of an inch thick.

On Nov. 26, 1971, Hardy and three other area policemen were flying to Campbell River on an investigation in a leased Cessna 172 when they were forced by bad weather to attempt a landing at the Courtenay civic airfield.

Battered by strong winds, the plane clipped a tree and flipped into the river. One of the passengers, Victoria RCMP Const. Michael Mason, was killed.

Hardy, in the passenger's seat beside the pilot, remembers only coming to while choking on the water. He suffered cuts around the mouth and to his hands as well as bruises.

It was six months later the fragment first made its presence felt. Hardy was working on a murder investigation when he was overcome by a violent coughing spell, accompanied by some bleeding. Tests followed and it was thought he was suffering from chronic bronchitis. Plexiglass would not show up on X-rays.

Watergate Missing Link?

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Federal investigators suspect the Watergate break-in was ordered because of Republican fears the Democrats possessed highly incriminating evidence against President Nixon, the Post-Dispatch reported today.

The evidence was believed to include information that would link the president to questionable large-scale contributions from billionaire Howard Hughes and to a favorable settlement of federal antitrust action against the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., the newspaper said.

"The investigative theory is highly significant because it would provide for the first time a rational explanation of the bugging and break-in that led to the far-reaching Watergate scandals," said the story, written by Thomas W. Ottenad, a Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

The newspaper said the theory would lend weight "to allegations of high-level involvement in the break-in because Mr. Nixon's effort to halt ITT prosecution and the connection of his intimate friend, Charles G. 'Bebe' Rebozo, with the reclusive Hughes were known only to the president or a few of his top associates."

White House documents obtained by the Post-Dispatch show a determined effort by the administration to link Hughes to the Democrats, the story said.

"Rebozo, who had a short while before received $100,000 from the mysterious billionaire that may have been intended for Mr. Nixon's benefit, played a key, secret part in the effort, the documents indicate," the newspaper said.

The story said Senate Watergate committee investigators are examining actively the theory of the burglars' true motivation.

Nixon Man Took Tapes

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A secret service agent said today that a crucial Watergate tape covering the period of President Nixon's talk with his former counsel John Dean was taken from a safe on July 11 under orders from senior White House officials by presidential aide Stephen Bull.

The agent conceded that his original notes on when tapes were removed and returned did not indicate whether the tapes in question had ever been returned although a log compiled later showed they were brought back the next day.

The White House has said that there is no recording of the April 15 Nixon-Dean talks —considered crucial to Watergate prosecution because Dean said he told the president he was co-operating with authorities—because the taping equipment malfunctioned.

The agent, Raymond Zumwalt said White House aides checked out batches of sensitive recordings on numerous occasions during the time the Watergate scandal was breaking open.

Also today, the White House offered to let Judge John Sirica listen to the April 15 tape so he could hear for himself that it ran out prior to the Dean meeting.

Sirica requested that lawyers for the White House and the Watergate prosecution force give him advice on how to get technical help to determine if White House recordings had been altered.

Zumwalt said that according to his notes Bull checked out 22 tapes, covering a period in late February and March of 1973, on April 25.

That was 10 days after the president learned that Dean had begun offering to give damaging testimony against top administration officials.

Zumwalt said Bull returned the 22 tapes later the same day, checked them out again the following day and returned them May 2.

Another batch of 26 tapes was checked out by Bull June 4, 1973, and returned at some unrecorded date, he said.

On June 25 a secret service official, Lou Sims, checked out a tape that included a telephone conversation between Nixon and Dean in middle of late March and on July 11 Bull checked out a total of six tapes, Zumwalt said, including the controversial April 15 tape.

Prosecutors raised the possibility today that the tapes covering the period of April 11-16 which were removed in July were taken from the White House in July by former presidential adviser H. R. Haldeman, listened to and never returned.

Richard Ben-Veniste, a lawyer for the Watergate special prosecution force, elicited through cross-examination of Zumwalt that the critical tape was removed from a safe on orders of senior White House officials at a time that Haldeman is known to have listened to at least one of Nixon's tape-recorded conversations bearing on Watergate.

Zumwalt conceded that his original raw notes do not indicate that the critical April tape was ever returned although a transcription of those notes made July 18 showed it was.

Haldeman, who quit as White House chief of staff, April 30 in a major post-Watergate shakeup, testified before the senate Watergate

Jaworski Replaces Cox

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Leon Jaworski, 68, former president of the American Bar Association, was appointed today to replace Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

Acting attorney-general Robert Bork, in announcing the appointment, said Jaworski would be unrestricted and independent in his freedom to pursue the Watergate investigation.

Bork also said Nixon will not discharge the special prosecutor, as he did Cox, without first consulting with congressional leaders and obtaining their majority agreement.

When asked if Jaworski would have the authority to initiate legal action against the president to obtain legal documents in his job, Bork said "absolutely."

The announcement was made at the same time that President Nixon nominated Sen. William Saxbe to be the next attorney-general.

Nixon personally went to the White House press-centre to announce the Saxbe nomination, while the Ohio Republican stood by his side smiling.

Saxbe "is an individual who wants to take this position to do everything he possibly can to serve the nation as the first lawyer of the nation," the president said.

Gov't Blocks Firm's Sale

The provincial government has blocked the sale of a logging company in the Kootenays to a Japanese-owned firm, Resources Minister Robert Williams said Wednesday.

Williams said there had been an application from Crestbrook Forest Industries, which is more than 50 per cent owned by the Mitsubishi-Honshu Corporation of Japan, to acquire the assets of Kootenay Forest Products Ltd., a major employer in the Nelson area.

The sale was blocked through government refusal to allow the necessary transfer of Crown timber cutting rights in the Kootenay Lake basin. Without cutting rights, acquisition of Kootenay Forest Products is meaningless to Crestbrook.

Williams said there were ing to approve the sale — environmental protection and Canadian ownership.

The minister said a recent government study showed a need for preservation of wildlife values in the Kootenay region and that the allowable cut of timber allocated to industry already exceeds recommended maximums in six of seven cutting areas.

Present logging practices in the area have resulted in the deterioration of the timber resource, he said, and logging major considerations in refusin some of the Kootenay areas has threatened the winter food supply of mountain caribou in the region.

As far as Canadian ownership is concerned, Williams said the Mitsubishi-Honshu Corporation already dominates the forest economy of the East Kootenay area. With the acquisition of Kootenay Forest Products, "this would have given them the dominant role over the whole Kootenay Lake basin in the West Kootenays as well," he said.

"The government was of the opinion that so dominant an equity position in an important region of the province should be in Canadian hands," Williams said.

The minister said it is unlikely Kootenay Forest Products will close down as a result of the sale not going through, since the company made profits in its last fiscal year.

The application by Crestbrook to acquire Kootenay Forest Products has been before the government for about six months, he said.

Kootenay Forest has a sawmill and plywood plants at Nelson.

Crestbrook Forest Industries has numerous forestry operations in the Kootenay region, in the area of Kimberley, Creston and Cranbrook.

Energy Message Twice-Delayed

Times News Services

A contentious and wide-ranging policy statement on the Canadian energy situation, including probable hefty increases across the country in the consumer price of gasoline and oil, was twice postponed by federal energy minister Donald Macdonald today.

Originally scheduled for 11 a.m. PST, Macdonald first delayed the statement until 2 p.m. PST and later put it back to 5 p.m. PST.

The announcement of the first delay said the speech was being stalled "to avoid any repercussion on Canadian stock markets," where oil issues posted heavy advances today.

There was no reason given for the second delay.

Earlier, Macdonald had said the statement would take a hard look at the varying price differences of gasoline and heating oil between Eastern Canada which relies on imported supplies and the West which uses domestic crude.

He hinted that these prices might be equalized so as not to pose an unnecessary hardship on eastern Canadians.

Canadian crude oil exports for November, meanwhile, will be fixed at 1,005,280 barrels a day, the lowest level since export controls were imposed by the government.

A National Energy Board spokesman said the figure, down from 1,118,744 barrels a day last month, reflects high domestic demand as winter approaches.

In the U.S. Exxon announced Wednesday it will begin allocating gasoline to all of its service stations east of the Rocky Mountains today because of the shortage of foreign crude oil.

Like most of the other major U.S. oil companies, Exxon had its dealers on allocation during the early summer period of tight gasoline supplies but it suspended the program in July.

HALLOWEEN HIJACKERS TRIED TORCH

NANAIMO (CP) — An 11-year-old boy making his Halloween rounds was waylaid by two older boys who doused his Dracula cape with lighter fluid and tried to ignite it.

Fortunately the match wouldn't light but the two boys, aged about 14, grabbed his candy loot and left.

The child's name is being withheld to prevent further attacks.

Police were investigating the incident today.

BORDER PLAN FIZZLES

BELFAST (UPI) — Members of a paramilitary Protestant organization set up roadblocks at minor frontier crossings today but failed to seal off the border between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic as threatened.

Police said uniformed members of the extremist Ulster Defence Association halted traffic on minor roads, but avoided major intersections linking Ulster and the republic.

UDA leaders had announced plans to seal off the frontier to halt the alleged infiltration of IRA gunmen into the province.

Canada-U.S. Air Talks Snag

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Canada-U.S. air talks have broken off without agreement and an American participant said today they had encountered a "serious impasse."

The Canadian delegation led by external affairs representative Michel Dupuy returned by transport department aircraft to Ottawa during the night after three days of negotiations which lasted from early morning until late in the night.

Michael Styles, head of the state department's aviation negotiation section, said there was no agreement on the question of airline charters between Canada and the United States.

"There is a serious impasse," he said. "It is not clear if it can be resolved."

He added that there are no plans "at this time" for a renewal of the negotiations, which have already dragged on for four years.

After meeting late into the night at the state department, the two sides "felt it was desirable to take another look" at the obstacles that remained, Styles said.

The two countries had initialled an agreement last August which resolved the questions of commercial air routes between Canada and the U.S. and the customs preclearance of passengers destined for each country.

Final approval and signature was postponed until accord could be reached on the $11-million-a-year charter business, but both sides said at the time that they hoped to wind up that section comparatively soon.

Instead, the talks have been prolonged through a series of meetings held alternately here and in Ottawa.

Gov't Said Lying On Inflation War

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare Minister Lalonde's statement that "parliament and the government are taking all reasonable steps" to control rising living costs has not been received favorably by Conservative Gerald Baldwin.

The statement, in a circular that accompanied this month's old-age pension cheques, is "a false, fraudulent and lying statement," Baldwin said.

In the Commons, Baldwin asked to be "disassociated from this cruel hoax the government is trying to perpetrate on the people of this country."

The food prices review board spent an estimated $110,000 on its 15-day blitz of supermarkets earlier this fall, the Commons was told Wednesday.

OTTAWA (CP) — Housing construction continues galloping ahead of last year's record-setting pace, says Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. 'Plotters' Seized

LA PAZ (Reuter) — Bolivian President Hugo Banzer Suarez has survived another alleged plot to overthrow his military-backed right-wing government. Interior Minister Col. STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Prime Minister Olof Palme ordered the biggest government shake-up in Sweden since the Second World War Wednesday and called his new administration "a team of comrades."

Canadian Truce Team Halted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will go to the United Nations Friday to discuss "problems" about the composition of the peace force and no Canadians will proceed to the Middle East in the meantime, he told the Commons today.

Sharp said he would meet Waldheim in New York because "questions have arisen that can only be settled by discussion with the secretary-general."

He referred to reports that the Soviet Union and Egypt objected to the presence of Canada—a NATO country — if no Warsaw Pact countries were included.

Canada has been asked to provide all logistics backup for the 7,000-man force and this was protested by Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik in private talks with Waldheim Wednesday on the grounds that there had been insufficient Security Council debate on the issue.

One theory is that Malik raised the objection to put pressure on Waldheim and on the Security Council to get Eastern European representation in the Middle East force. The Soviets have been ateempting to get a Polish contingent accepted but the suggestion has been firmly rejected by Israel.

Israel took its terms for Middle East peace talks to Washington today, picking up where Egypt left off.

At the truce front, opposing soldiers manned the shaky cease-fire lines within shouting distance of each other.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir was in Washington to seek "answers and clarifications" about U.S. policy in meetings today with President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and was expected to seek U.S. support for a prisoner-of-war exchange before Israeli troops pull back to the lines they held at the Oct. 22 start of the

IN THE HOUSE

A beefed-up Human Rights Act — with penalties of up to $5,000 for damages to a person's self respect — was introduced in the legislature Wednesday. For full details see Page 3.

On the same page is a story which claims there is an unusual trading pattern concerning Kaiser Resources and an MLA asked the government if it is purchasing shares in four B.C. companies.

There's good news on Page 11 for widows of government employees and owners of motor homes. Widows who remarry will not have their pensions cut off or reduced. And for motor home owners licence fees will be reduced, some by as much as 50 per cent.

Also on Page 11 is a story concerning the new Department of Mines and Petroleum Resources Act with the opposition again arguing the act gives the government too much power and is blank cheque legislation.

Farm May Ooze Into Trench

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A new Capital Regional District soil removal bylaw will come too late to help a Langford man who fears he'll spend the winter watching his farmland slide into a ditch.

"The soil hasn't started to move yet, but it may when we get heavier rain," said Barry Fisher of 3108 Glen Lake Road.

Fisher's 20-acre farm borders on an eight-acre strip of land sold recently to a contractor for its topsoil value. Both areas are composed of a rich and oozing topsoil known as "peat-muck" which sells for up to $5.50 a cubic yard.

Fisher farms his land but the contractor next door is only interested in hauling out the valuable topsoil, Fisher said.

He complained to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer and has been informed the minister has asked Agriculture Minister David Stupich for a report.

The contractor dug a 600-foot trench next to Fisher's property and a month ago began hauling out topsoil, Fisher said.

"This soil is very fluid and with extra rain, my land will start filling up this trench for the contractor.

"We need a soil removal bylaw to stop this, but it's not through yet. The only thing that wil lstop them is a court injunction."

The regional district's soil removal bylaw, which would require a contractor wanting to remove topsoil to prove that it would not damage adjoining land, was approved last week by the board and is now waiting for approval by the municipal affairs minister.

Fisher's field is low-lying and floods two or three feet in the winter, putting enough pressure on it to cause it to slide into the adjoining trench, he said.

"That piece of land is too low to build on. It's only good for farmland, but the contractor bought itj ust to desecrate it, not to farm it," Fisher said.

But the land isn't selling at farmland prices.

"I wanted to buy it to add to my farm, but the price was about $35,000 and that's topsoil price, not farm price and there's no way it's worth $35,000 for farmland.

"There are many places contractors can take topsoil from where it doesn't do any harm, but when it's prime farmland they're defacing, it's a real shame."

If Fisher's land slides away this winter, it won't be his family's first such experience.

"About 20 years ago, when my father had the farm, a neighbor dug trenches for excavating and some of our land slid into the trenches — some of our fence posts sank almost two feet."

The Glen Lake Ratepayers' Association is also concerned about the situation because when the trenches fill with soil and become "boggy and swamp-like," the spring runoff will carry the bog directly into Glen Lake.

"If the contractor is taking the soil out, he should have to fill up the hole with gravel before the winter to stop Fisher's soil from falling into the trench and to stop the drainage into Glen Lake," John Williams, associate president, said.

Bitterman On Ballot —Judge

Henry Bitterman is back in the race.

Provincial court judge F. S. Green ruled today that Bitterman's nomination papers for an aldermanic seat on Victoria city council must be accepted by the returning officer Morran Waller.

Bitterman's candidacy was thrown into dispute Monday when Waller refused to accept the papers, saying the real estate operator was involved in an expropriation proceeding with the city and therefore ineligible for office.

Judge Green ruled today that because the expropriation bylaw had never been filed with the Victoria Land Registry office, the proceeding was not valid and could not be used to block Bitterman's candidacy.

Open Space Closed

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Open Space today became a closed space, and it will remain closed until work has been completed to meet fire safety standards.

Gene Miller, director of the arts centre at 510 Fort, gave that assurance to city aldermen today, after being told council was not prepared to continue tolerating a potential fire hazard in the community.

At the fire committee meeting, Mayor Peter Pollen told Miller: "If there's a flash fire in that place and 40 or 50 kids are burned the first one to get hung is the mayor . . ."

Pollen said so much "indulgence" had been extended toward Open Space in the past that council had placed lives in jeopardy. That tolerance had to end now, he said, even if it meant the extreme step of closing down the converted warehouse.

Brandishing a two-inch-thick file of correspondence — "the thickest file we've had in all my years with the department" — Fire Chief Eric Simmons said his department had "bent over backwards" to cooperate with Open Space and sympathize with its financial difficulties.

"But I've come to the end of my sympathy," he said. "I think the time has come to bring to the public's attention that this man (Miller) thumbs his nose at the regulations; and that he is placing people who occupy that building in danger."

★

Simmons said the department's problems with Miller dated back to July, 1972, and he had consistently failed to comply with the requirements of the Fire Marshall's office.

As a result, he said, Miller was prosecuted last June and found guilty on four charges. But Miller was continuing to open the building to public use, without the work being carried out and in contravention of the regulations.

Simmons said he was now preparing the information to lay three further charges against Miller.

"He keeps putting people in there and we keep telling him not to. He knows the law but, frankly, he keeps thumbing his nose at us," Simmons told the committee.

When Simmins referred to a "page and half" of work items requiring attention, Miller said they were mainly minor jobs such as filling cracks between wallboards and changing exit signs.

★

He said he was confident the work could be completed within two days.

Outside the committee room, Miller told the Times he may have to arrange alternative accommodation for the "People Show" of improvisational theatre scheduled to play at Open Space this weekend.

He said one of the facts not brought out at the meeting was that his revised plans submitted to the Fire Marshall's office in Vancouver "sat on their desks for five or six weeks while they were on vacation."

A crafts fair at Open Space was closed last Christmas on orders of the fire and health departments.

LUNATIC POT TEMPEST!

Gene Miller, director of the Open Space arts centre on Fort Street, admitted to city aldermen today that he agrees a poster advertising a recent art exhibition there was in "poor taste."

Miller agreed with comments expressed by Mayor Peter Pollen deploring the poster's illustration of a vulva. But, in a memorandum circulated to Group A committee, Miller said rejection of the poster would have signified to the artists concerned "the rejection by Open Space of their values and integrity."

Pollen said flatly he was not prepared to spend his time discussing whether the poster was or was not obscene.

"I have had people from your organization come into my waiting room, act like animals, tear up paper and throw it on the floor and yell obscenities," he told Miller.

"It's becoming a tempest in a lunatic pot."

Miller replied the person Pollen was referring to was one of the artists, and not connected with the Open Space Centre.

Temperature Dropping

Victoria temperatures were low but Vancouver ones were lower overnight.

Temperatures at Victoria International Airport dropped to 36 degrees overnight, cool but a long way from the record low of 31.

At Vancouver international airport the mercury dipped to 30 degrees, the lowest for Nov. 1 since 1951 when it was 26 degrees.

The Victoria weather office says temperatures will be a little lower Friday if the weather stays clear.

In the interior, Smithers had a low of 26 and Cranbrook 27.

Legal Snag Hits Sale Of Theatre

Negotiations by Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay to buy the Royal Theatre have hit a legal snag which may require the intervention of Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer.

The stumbling block is a section of the Municipal Act which states that no municipality can have title to property beyond its boundaries without going to the voters in a referendum.

The three municipalities have agreed to buy the theatre from Famous Players for $250,000. Victoria's share would be $110,050, Saanich would pay $106,025 and Oak Bay, $33,925.

None of the mayors involved consider the legal snag insurmountable and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis reports the municipalities' solicitors are combining efforts to overcome the problem.

"We have two alternatives," Curtis said. "The city could hold title and an agreement be drawn up that would protect the interests of the other two municipalities. In that case, Saanich would give a grant.

"The other alternative would be to have the department of municipal affairs find some other option for us."

Describing the problem as "very minor," Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said she didn't think it feasible that the city could purchase the theatre with grants from Oak Bay and Saanich.

"I can't really see us explaining away a grant to the rich city of Victoria," she said.

"It was just unfortunate, perhaps, that none of us asked our solicitors if there would be any problems," she added, "I think it would be a great shame if this was made into an election issue or anything of that sort at this time."

If the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee had known of the legal snag before negotiations began, Elford said, there still wouldn't have been time to hold a referendum before the Oct. 15 deadline.

"A referendum is a costly matter and if you have to put it over the three municipalities it's a waste of thousands of dollars," she said.

She suggested special provincial legislation could be passed to amend the Municipal Act section which is causing the problem.

This was done when the core municipalities faced a similar situation in the cost sharing of the Centennial Stadium, sited on the University of Victoria's grounds.

That was in March 1966 when Municipal Affairs Minister Dave Campbell made amendments to the Municipalities Validating and Enabling Act in the annual omnibus bill.

The amendment to permit the municipalities, the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee and the university to share costs read "it is declared to be lawful . . . and binding on all parties."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen who has headed the drive to purchase the theatre, said today the legal snag doesn't pose any significant obstacle to the closing of the deal with Famous Players.

"Where there is goodwill among the parties concerned a solution can always be found to such technicalities," he observed.

Pranksters 'Ground' Policemen

Halloween pranksters hit the Victoria City Police garage on Fisgard Street Wednesday night and their actions resulted in several grounded motorcycle policemen early today.

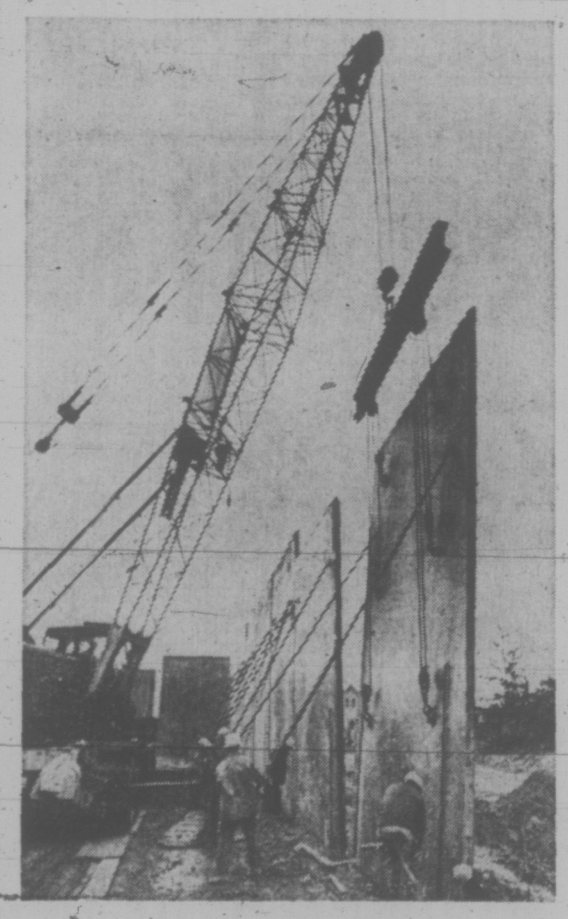

A police spokesman said the pranksters sneaked into the garage and turned on the ignitions of the parked motorcycles.

By this morning, the batteries were dead and required re-charging before the policemen could get o with their rounds.

There are no suspects as yet, the spokesman said.

BURNING CROSS 10 feet high was thrown on the lawn of Dr. T. C. Todd, 70 Beach Drive, Wednesday night. Oak Bay police say it was a Halloween prank, and that several boys were seen running from the home by a neighbor. See also Page 24. (Irving Strickland photo.)

THEY DEAL 'EM OFF and stack 'em up to make the walls of a new warehouse for Johnston Terminals. This is the first time in Victoria a project like this has used pre-cast concrete panels of this size. They weigh 25 tons each. The 400 by 150-foot warehouse, plus a two-storey office building, is just west of the existing terminal. (Bill Halkett photo.)

C. Saanich May Again Appeal Police Ruling

Central Saanich police constable James Earl will not know until Monday at the earliest whether he will get his job back, or whether his case will go to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Earl, dismissed Jan. 15, will be re-hired if Central Saanich accepts a decision from the B.C. Appeal Court Tuesday, but Mayor Archie Galbraith said today council will not act until it receives a report from the city's solicitor, Darrall Collins.

Collins said his summation of the Appeal Court ruling and recommendations regarding the case might be ready when council meets Monday.

He wouldn't say whether he will suggest the municipality take the case to the Supreme Court.

The controversy started when Central Saanich fired Earl shortly after a police union was formed.

Earl said the dismissal resulted from his involvement with the union.

The B.C. Labor Relations board supported the police officer and ordered Central Saanich to re-hire him and to compensate him for lost wages. The ruling was appealed.

Mr. Justice Victori Dryer of the B.C. Supreme Court decided the board did not have the power to order C. Saanich to reinstate Earl.

Dryer ruled that policemen are not employees in the ordinary sense.

The Labor Board has jurisdiction only over persons officially classified as "employees." This was appealed by the LRB.

The argument advanced by the board, and accepted by the Appeal Court, asserts the board has the power to define who is an employee.

Earl said the long judicial procedings have been caused by the Central Saanich mayor pursuing the case for political reason.

He declined to say what those political reasons are.

Galbraith said Earl was discharged for "good and proper reason," but declined to say publicly what they are.

The reasons behind dismissal may be obtained, Galbraith added, by any person who goes to the municipal office and asks to read the documents on the case.

Ask The Times

Q. How many seats are there in the Memorial Arena? How many are in the blues? How many tickets are put on sale for the ordinary public, for events such as the touring NHL teams? How do people get tickets before the opening of such a sale? If the arena is supported by the city of Victoria, who looks after to see that things are done fairly and in the interest of the general public?—T.A.

A. There are 5,021 seats. None are divided into a "blue" section, and prices vary for different events. All tickets are put on sale to the public, but season ticket-holders are given first chance at the seats. The arena once let people reserve tickets before they came on sale, but the policy has been discontinued. The city's parks and recreation committee is responsible for the arena. Chairman is Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

Handicapped Are Heard

Physically handicapped British Columbians have experienced years of frustration because they have been separated from the making of policy which affects their lives, M. Merle Smith of the department of human resources said today.

Smith is chairman of a conference being held in Victoria this week which is aimed at ending that separation. Some 50 delegates, most of them physically handicapped, have been invited by Human Resources Minister Norman Levi to discuss their needs.

For the past two days they have been divided into workshops to discuss architectural barriers, employment, education, income security, in-home care and transportation. The groups will table their recommendations on these subjects when the conference ends later today.

"There has been a lot of frustration in the past," Smith, who is herself confined to a wheelchair, observed this morning. "Before the only contact many of these people had with those who made policy was perhaps through a letter or an occasional meeting with one minister.

"At this conference we've had almost all the ministers over here, and their deputies."

She said the views presented by the delegates — some of whom are just individually concerned — are "not necessarily innovative because people have been thinking about them for a long time. But this is the first time these views have been aired, in many cases."

The workshops have been instructed to consider both short-term and long-term goals of government policy effecting the handicapped, she said.

At a dinner given by the government Wednesday night, Levi told the conference participants he expected there would be another conference within a year at which the handicapped persons would be invited to express their opinions to the cabinet and senior civil servants.

Highways to Bare Park Widening Plan

Highways Minister Graham Lea promised to release tentative engineering plans for widening the highway through Goldstream Park and some alternative routes, Ken Gibbard, president of the Victoria Sierra Club, said today.

Gibbard was a member of a group of environmentalists who met the minister today to discuss the preservation of Goldstream Park, threatened by the widening proposal.

"The interview was most encouraging," he said. "We asked the minister to supply us with some plans for widening the one-mile route through the park. He (the minister) was frank and open."

Val Gislason, president of the Wildlife Action Committee, said Lea told them it was a difficult problem because motorists are of two minds on the widening proposal.

"That is when a motorist wants to get to Nanaimo quickly he wants a four-lane highway through the park," she said. "But the next day if he is picnicking in the park, he is in favor of keeping the route as it is."

She said the minister also told them consideration must be given to other means of transport.

She quoted Lea as saying "we can't go on facilitating the private car forever."

The group also suggested the highways take over the E and N railway right-of-way on the west side of the park and use it as an alternative route.

Ed Hardy with memento

GLASS SHARD COUGHED UP

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Ed Hardy, veteran Victoria policeman, has literally coughed up a menacing memento of a plane crash almost two years ago.

It's a fragment of plexiglass with razor-sharp edges, apparently from the shattered windscreen of the plane, which was swept into one of Hardy's lungs along with water he swallowed when the plane flipped upside-down into the Courtenay River.

The fragment is triangular, measuring just over an inch long, better than half an inch wide and eighth of an inch thick.

On Nov. 26, 1971, Hardy and three other area policemen were flying to Campbell River on an investigation in a leased Cessna 172 when they were forced by bad weather to attempt a landing at the Courtenay civic airfield.

Battered by strong winds, the plane clipped a tree and flipped into the river. One of the passengers, Victoria RCMP Const. Michael Mason, was killed.

Hardy, in the passenger's seat beside the pilot, remembers only coming to while choking on the water. He suffered cuts around the mouth and to his hands as well as bruises.

It was six months later the fragment first made its presence felt. Hardy was working on a murder investigation when he was overcome by a violent coughing spell, accompanied by some bleeding. Tests followed and it was thought he was suffering from chronic bronchitis. Plexiglass would not show up on X-rays.

Watergate Missing Link?

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Federal investigators suspect the Watergate break-in was ordered because of Republican fears the Democrats possessed highly incriminating evidence against President Nixon, the Post-Dispatch reported today.

The evidence was believed to include information that would link the president to questionable large-scale contributions from billionaire Howard Hughes and to a favorable settlement of federal antitrust action against the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., the newspaper said.

"The investigative theory is highly significant because it would provide for the first time a rational explanation of the bugging and break-in that led to the far-reaching Watergate scandals," said the story, written by Thomas W. Ottenad, a Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

The newspaper said the theory would lend weight "to allegations of high-level involvement in the break-in because Mr. Nixon's effort to halt ITT prosecution and the connection of his intimate friend, Charles G. 'Bebe' Rebozo, with the reclusive Hughes were known only to the president or a few of his top associates."

White House documents obtained by the Post-Dispatch show a determined effort by the administration to link Hughes to the Democrats, the story said.

"Rebozo, who had a short while before received $100,000 from the mysterious billionaire that may have been intended for Mr. Nixon's benefit, played a key, secret part in the effort, the documents indicate," the newspaper said.

The story said Senate Watergate committee investigators are examining actively the theory of the burglars' true motivation.

Nixon Man Took Tapes

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A secret service agent said today that a crucial Watergate tape covering the period of President Nixon's talk with his former counsel John Dean was taken from a safe on July 11 under orders from senior White House officials by presidential aide Stephen Bull.

The agent conceded that his original notes on when tapes were removed and returned did not indicate whether the tapes in question had ever been returned although a log compiled later showed they were brought back the next day.

The White House has said that there is no recording of the April 15 Nixon-Dean talks —considered crucial to Watergate prosecution because Dean said he told the president he was co-operating with authorities—because the taping equipment malfunctioned.

The agent, Raymond Zumwalt said White House aides checked out batches of sensitive recordings on numerous occasions during the time the Watergate scandal was breaking open.

Also today, the White House offered to let Judge John Sirica listen to the April 15 tape so he could hear for himself that it ran out prior to the Dean meeting.

Sirica requested that lawyers for the White House and the Watergate prosecution force give him advice on how to get technical help to determine if White House recordings had been altered.

Zumwalt said that according to his notes Bull checked out 22 tapes, covering a period in late February and March of 1973, on April 25.

That was 10 days after the president learned that Dean had begun offering to give damaging testimony against top administration officials.

Zumwalt said Bull returned the 22 tapes later the same day, checked them out again the following day and returned them May 2.

Another batch of 26 tapes was checked out by Bull June 4, 1973, and returned at some unrecorded date, he said.

On June 25 a secret service official, Lou Sims, checked out a tape that included a telephone conversation between Nixon and Dean in middle of late March and on July 11 Bull checked out a total of six tapes, Zumwalt said, including the controversial April 15 tape.

Prosecutors raised the possibility today that the tapes covering the period of April 11-16 which were removed in July were taken from the White House in July by former presidential adviser H. R. Haldeman, listened to and never returned.

Richard Ben-Veniste, a lawyer for the Watergate special prosecution force, elicited through cross-examination of Zumwalt that the critical tape was removed from a safe on orders of senior White House officials at a time that Haldeman is known to have listened to at least one of Nixon's tape-recorded conversations bearing on Watergate.

Zumwalt conceded that his original raw notes do not indicate that the critical April tape was ever returned although a transcription of those notes made July 18 showed it was.

Haldeman, who quit as White House chief of staff, April 30 in a major post-Watergate shakeup, testified before the senate Watergate

Jaworski Replaces Cox

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Leon Jaworski, 68, former president of the American Bar Association, was appointed today to replace Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

Acting attorney-general Robert Bork, in announcing the appointment, said Jaworski would be unrestricted and independent in his freedom to pursue the Watergate investigation.

Bork also said Nixon will not discharge the special prosecutor, as he did Cox, without first consulting with congressional leaders and obtaining their majority agreement.

When asked if Jaworski would have the authority to initiate legal action against the president to obtain legal documents in his job, Bork said "absolutely."

The announcement was made at the same time that President Nixon nominated Sen. William Saxbe to be the next attorney-general.

Nixon personally went to the White House press centre to announce the Saxbe nomination, while the Ohio Republican stood by his side smiling.

Saxbe "is an individual who wants to take this position to do everything he possibly can to serve the nation as the first lawyer of the nation," the president said.

Gov't Blocks Firm's Sale

The provincial government has blocked the sale of a logging company in the Kootenays to a Japanese-owned firm, Resources Minister Robert Williams said Wednesday.

Williams said there had been an application from Crestbrook Forest Industries, which is more than 50 per cent owned by the Mitsubishi-Honshu Corporation of Japan, to acquire the assets of Kootenay Forest Products Ltd., a major employer in the Nelson area.

The sale was blocked through government refusal to allow the necessary transfer of Crown timber cutting rights in the Kootenay Lake basin. Without cutting rights, acquisition of Kootenay Forest Products is meaningless to Crestbrook.

Williams said there were major considerations in refusing to approve the sale — environmental protection and Canadian ownership.

The minister said a recent government study showed a need for preservation of wildlife values in the Kootenay region and that the allowable cut of timber allocated to industry already exceeds recommended maximums in six of seven cutting areas.

Present logging practices in the area have resulted in the deterioration of the timber resource, he said, and logging in some of the Kootenay areas has threatened the winter food supply of mountain caribou in the region.

As far as Canadian ownership is concerned, Williams said the Mitsubishi-Honshu Corporation already dominates the forest economy of the East Kootenay area. With the acquisition of Kootenay Forest Products, "this would have given them the dominant role over the whole Kootenay Lake basin in the West Kootenays as well," he said.

"The government was of the opinion that so dominant an equity position in an important region of the province should be in Canadian hands," Williams said.

The minister said it is unlikely Kootenay Forest Products will close down as a result of the sale not going through, since the company made profits in its last fiscal year.

The application by Crestbrook to acquire Kootenay Forest Products has been before the government for about six months, he said.

Kootenay Forest has a sawmill and plywood plants at Nelson.

Crestbrook Forest Industries has numerous forestry operations in the Kootenay region, in the area of Kimberley, Creston and Cranbrook.

Energy Message Twice-Delayed

Times News Services

A contentious and wide-ranging policy statement on the Canadian energy situation, including probable hefty increases across the country in the consumer price of gasoline and oil, was twice postponed by federal energy minister Donald Macdonald today.

Originally scheduled for 11 a.m. PST, Macdonald first delayed the statement until 2 p.m. PST and later put it back to 5 p.m. PST.

The announcement of the first delay said the speech was being stalled "to avoid any repercussion on Canadian stock markets," where oil issues posted heavy advances today.

There was no reason given for the second delay.

Earlier, Macdonald had said the statement would take a hard look at the varying price differences of gasoline and heating oil between Eastern Canada which relies on imported supplies and the West which uses domestic crude.

He hinted that these prices might be equalized so as not to pose an unnecessary hardship on eastern Canadians.

Canadian crude oil exports for November, meanwhile, will be fixed at $1,005,280 barrels a day, the lowest level since export controls were imposed by the government.

A National Energy Board spokesman said the figure, down from 1,118,744 barrels a day last month, reflects high domestic demand as winter approaches.

In the U.S. Exxon announced Wednesday it will begin allocating gasoline to all of its service stations east of the Rocky Mountains today because of the shortage of foreign crude oil.

Like most of the other major U.S. oil companies, Exxon had its dealers on allocation during the early summer period of tight gasoline supplies but it suspended the program in July.

HALLOWEEN HIJACKERS TRIED TORCH

NANAIMO (CP) — An 11-year-old boy making his Halloween rounds was waylaid by two older boys who doused his Dracula cape with lighter fluid and tried to ignite it.

Fortunately the match wouldn't light but the two boys, aged about 14, grabbed his candy loot and left.

The child's name is being withheld to prevent further attacks.

Police were investigating the incident today.

BORDER PLAN FIZZLES

BELFAST (UPI) — Members of a paramilitary Protestant organization set up roadblocks at minor frontier crossings today but failed to seal off the border between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic as threatened.

Police said uniformed members of the extremist Ulster Defence Association halted traffic on minor roads, but avoided major intersections linking Ulster and the republic.

UDA leaders had announced plans to seal off the frontier to halt the alleged infiltration of IRA gunmen into the province.

Canada-U.S. Air Talks Snag

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Canada-U.S. air talks have broken off without agreement and an American participant said today they had encountered a "serious impasse."

The Canadian delegation led by external affairs representative Michel Dupuy returned by transport department aircraft to Ottawa during the night after three days of negotiations which lasted from early morning until late in the night.

Michael Styles, head of the state department's aviation negotiation section, said there was no agreement on the question of airline charters between Canada and the United States.

"There is a serious impasse," he said. "It is not clear if it can be resolved."

He added that there are no plans "at this time" for a renewal of the negotiations, which have already dragged on for four years.

After meeting late into the night at the state department, the two sides "felt it was desirable to take another look" at the obstacles that remained, Styles said.

The two countries had initialled an agreement last August which resolved the questions of commercial air routes between Canada and the U.S. and the customs preclearance of passengers destined for each country.

Final approval and signature was postponed until accord could be reached on the $11-million-a-year charter business, but both sides said at the time that they hoped to wind up that section comparatively soon.

Instead, the talks have been prolonged through a series of meetings held alternately here and in Ottawa.

Hush-Hush A-Plant Accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government disclosed today an accident occured Oct. 20 at its Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic facility involving highly secret experimental equipment.

One experimental device was virtually destroyed and some others were damaged, an Atomic Energy Commission spokesman said.

Disclosure of the accident—in which no one was reported hurt and the cause of which is not yet determined—was held up for nine days because the project is "a secret and sensitive one," he said. The project is aimed at developing a new process for producing uranium for weapons and power plants.

The spokesman explained that progress on U.S. experiments with the process—called the "gas centrifuge" — have long been kept secret from any country, including friendly ones, in part because the process if perfected, could be used to produce fissionable uranium for weapons.

Gov't Said Lying On Inflation War

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare Minister Lalonde's statement that "parliament and the government are taking all reasonable steps" to control rising living costs has not been received favorably by Conservative Gerald Baldwin.

The statement, in a circular that accompanied this month's old-age pension cheques, is "a false, fraudulent and lying statement," Baldwin said.

In the Commons, Baldwin asked to be "disassociated from this cruel hoax the government is trying to perpetrate on the people of this country."

The food prices review board spent an estimated $110,000 on its 15-day blitz of supermarkets earlier this fall, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Canadian Truce Team Halted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will go to the United Nations Friday to discuss "problems" about the composition of the peace force and no Canadians will proceed to the Middle East in the meantime, he told the Commons today.

Sharp said he would meet Waldheim in New York because "questions have arisen that can only be settled by discussion with the secretary-general."

He referred to reports that the Soviet Union and Egypt objected to the presence of Canada—a NATO country — if no Warsaw Pact countries were included.

Canada has been asked to provide all logistics backup for the 7,000-man force and this was protested by Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik in private talks with Waldheim Wednesday on the grounds that there had been insufficient Security Council debate on the issue.

One theory is that Malik raised the objection to put pressure on Waldheim and on the Security Council to get Eastern European representation in the Middle East force. The Soviets have been attempting to get a Polish contingent accepted but the suggestion has been firmly rejected by Israel.

At the truce front, opposing soldiers manned the shaky cease-fire lines within shouting distance of each other.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir was in Washington to seek "answers and clarifications" about U.S. policy in meetings today with President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and was expected to seek U.S. support for a prisoner-of-war exchange before Israeli troops pull back to the lines they held at the Oct. 22 start of the

IN THE HOUSE

A beefed-up Human Rights Act — with penalties of up to $5,000 for damages to a person's self respect — was introduced in the legislature Wednesday. For full details see Page 3.

On the same page is a story which claims there is an unusual trading pattern concerning Kaiser Resources and an MLA asked the government if it is purchasing shares in four B.C. companies.

There's good news on Page 11 for widows of government employees and owners of motor homes. Widows who remarry will not have their pensions cut off or reduced. And for motor home owners' licence fees will be reduced, some by as much as 50 per cent.

Also on Page 11 is a story concerning the new Department of Mines and Petroleum Resources Act with the opposition again arguing the act gives the government too much power and is blank cheque legislation.
